10 Years of Impact

Greetings,

Anniversaries often give way to reflections, and this year—which is my 11th year as the president of Spelman College—carries more than a decade of hindsight. In looking back, I'm energized by how much impact this one college has had on our city, nation, and world.

The past 10 years have seen Spelman transform—and extend that transformative energy far beyond our hallowed gates. In 2004, the Women's Research and Resource Center expanded its global footprint by organizing an international conference on women and HIV/AIDS in Africa and the African Diaspora with support from the Ford Foundation and other generous donors (1). In 2008, the opportunities for more students to study abroad were increased with the creation of the Gordon-Zeto Endowed Fund for International Initiatives. Infusing the curriculum with international elements and recruiting students from around the world, this new hub supports the College's goal of every student having a global experience by 2015 (2).

At the national level, the College has helped Spelman students stay enrolled during some of the largest natural and financial disasters of the past decade. After Hurricane Katrina, for example, an emergency scholarship fund provided financial support to more than 70 Spelman students affected by the storm (3). Likewise, the President's Safety Net Fund was established to help students whose families have been adversely affected by the economic downturn and subsequent credit crunch (4).

The decade also has seen our nation face a growing health crisis, in particular a disproportionate growth in health disparities between African-Americans and other racial groups. Spelman students are helping to answer that challenge. With a lead gift from Dignity Health in 2010, the College is preparing women for health-focused careers through scholarships, internships, international service trips, and research and conference opportunities (5+6). Having much-needed health professionals of color will help those communities with the greatest needs be healthier in years to come.

Bringing women of color into the academy is another way that Spelman students are shaping our nation. During the past decade, the UNCF/Mellon Program at Spelman has prepared women to pursue doctoral degrees (7). And a recent initiative, the Social Justice Fellows Program, has a parallel goal—to change the face of public policy advocacy by diversifying leadership of the social justice movement. Supported by Atlantic Philanthropies, the program allows 10 rising juniors to explore how social policy responds to critical needs in education, economics, and health, giving women a valuable foundation in advocacy (8).

The College also has been busy equipping its historic campus with 21st-century necessities. From a campus-wide wireless network to a state-of-the-art, 24/7 study center in the recently renovated Laura Spelman Rockefeller Hall, students are gaining access to the latest tools and infrastructure to enhance their studies (9).

We couldn't have accomplished any of these far-reaching initiatives without our donors. Support for Spelman has come from alumnae, students, parents, trustees, friends, foundations, businesses, and government—all of whom believe in the impact we can make when we work collaboratively (10). Together we are preparing Spelman women to become change agents in their communities and worlds, and to become a force for good in the next decade and beyond.

With sincere thanks,

Beverly Daniel Tatum
President, Spelman College

Darlyne Atkinson Killian, C'48, knew that some artists are born, but she also believed that artists could be made, shaped, and taught.

In fact, she spent a lifetime doing just that, and when she retired as the lead administrator of the art program for the Atlanta Public Schools, she was known as “the art teacher of the art teachers.”

Killian got her start in art at Spelman, where she majored in art and designed sets and costumes for the drama department. Ever a trailblazer, she was the first, and for many years only, African-American working on a graduate degree in art on the recently desegregated University of Georgia campus in the 1960s. A free spirit, she went on to teach interdisciplinary classes combining art, the sciences, and music long before the term was coined or the approach became popular. She and her husband, William H. Killian Jr., a photojournalist, also held joint exhibitions of their work—her paintings and sculpture alongside his photographs. But the biggest motivation during her long career was passing on her love of art to middle and high school students in Atlanta.

When Killian passed away in 2006, her daughter found a fitting tribute to honor her mother’s two passions of art and education. Darnita Killian, C'79, established a scholarship for art majors at Spelman in her mother’s name.

“Mom would feel humble to have this scholarship named for her, but she wouldn’t be surprised that I did it,” says Killian, vice president of Student Affairs at Spelman. “Both of my parents drove home the need for education. It was a big focus in our house. I can’t imagine supporting anything as important as education or in any place other than Spelman or Morehouse.”

From before the younger Killian was born, the Atlanta University Center was woven into the tapestry of her family’s life. Her parents met and married here, and they often returned to campus with their three children. Darnita herself was named Miss Spelman Nursery School at age 1. She attended football games at Morehouse with her parents and brothers and frequented the art department with her mother. At age 10, she waited for hours in line with her family to honor Dr. Martin Luther King, who lay in state in Sister’s Chapel.

An economics major, Killian was the 12th woman in her family to graduate from Spelman, starting with her aunt, Mattie Neal, in 1897. To date, 16 of Killian’s relatives—her grandmother, mother, sister, sister-in-law, niece, two aunts, and a cluster of cousins—have earned Spelman degrees. Four younger cousins may get the same chance one day.

Kristyn McKinney, C'2016, a Spelman first-year student, is getting her chance right now, thanks to the Killian legacy.

A self-taught artist from Fairburn, Ga., McKinney is the second recipient of the Darlyne Atkinson Killian Endowed Scholarship. In the tradition of her predecessor, McKinney creates landscapes, portraits, and scenes from everyday life, using a variety of materials from charcoal and pastels to watercolors and acrylics. She has attended summer programs for young artists at Atlanta’s historic art community, the Goat Farm, exhibited her work at the Georgia Aquarium, and donated several pieces to One Loved Generation, an annual art fundraiser that supports a local homeless shelter. She also has volunteered as a docent at Clark Atlanta University’s art gallery.

Several of McKinney’s friends suggested that she choose a field more lucrative than art, but like Darlyne Killian, she is following her passion. “The scholarship encourages me,” she says. “It shows me that people here do appreciate art and artists.”

“Mom would feel humble to have this scholarship named for her, but she wouldn’t be surprised that I did it.”

The Spelman College Center for Health Disparities Research and Education (CHDRE) is focused on increasing the number of African-American women students entering graduate programs in health disparities. But the College has a serious problem that threatens to undermine its success in empowering young women to be leaders in not just healthcare, but in every area of their lives. That challenge is a lack of literacy about what it takes to maintain health and wellness.

Based on Spelman's analysis, many of the College's students already have hypertension, Type II diabetes, or other chronic diseases usually associated with a population of much older people. The Spelman community is grappling with its share of serious conditions and illnesses that mirror alarming health patterns among African-American women nationally.

According to a 2011 report on disparities from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Black women have the highest prevalence of obesity in the United States (about four out of five are overweight), putting them at risk for diabetes, cardiovascular disease, and other chronic health problems. A National Institutes of Health study that followed girls for a decade found that physical activity declined dramatically in girls, with the steepest dropoff in Black girls, who by age 17 reported almost no physical activity.

The fix for these problems in the nation and at Spelman requires no less than a wellness revolution, says President Beverly Daniel Tatum: "We as an institution have an opportunity to change this epidemic, and we are committed to educating the whole person—mind, body, and spirit."

For starters, Spelman is dramatically enhancing its wellness program to improve health and transform lives. Already that emphasis is paying off for students like Danielle Winfrey, C'2013, who has lost 50 pounds on her way to a goal of 100 pounds by graduation. Pursuing a career in medicine, Winfrey wants to show her future patients by example that they can take control of their health.

It's been a long haul since the senior started with Spelman's wellness programs as a first-year student. Working with wellness coordinator Chavonne Shorter, Winfrey has kept food logs and eaten alongside wellness staff in the cafeteria, learning to make healthy dietary choices. She also began working out twice a week with Team 6—a group of committed Spelman women who train together, running stairs, finishing obstacle courses, and inspiring each other to meet their health goals. Winfrey says they are family.

Theresa Marquez, an executive assistant in media and information technology at Spelman, is part of Team 6, too. Her motivation goes beyond losing weight. Marquez is fighting genetics and a family history of high blood pressure. She's already lost 35 pounds, and if she can lose more, her doctor says she will be able to forego the high blood pressure medicine she now takes.

Germaine McAuley, chair of physical education and director of athletics, sees her job as creating an environment for the Spelman community that is "healthy, healthy, healthy." Over the last few years, the College has increased hours at the Wellness Center, created incentive programs for campus units with the most weight loss, organized fitness workshops, and offered more specialty classes such as Zumba, belly dancing, and yoga. The program is growing, with more than 3,000 monthly visits to the fitness center.

However, one barrier to Spelman's progress in creating a healthy campus is its physical plant. Read Hall—named for Florence Read, Spelman's fourth president—houses a gymnasium that was built in 1951 for the 500 students then on campus. Dedicated in 2006 in honor of Marguerite Simon, C'35, the gym is now stretched beyond capacity to accommodate a student body of 2,100, plus more than 500 faculty and staff. With a lead anonymous gift of $5 million, Spelman is making plans to renovate and expand Read Hall, a project estimated to cost $13 million and scheduled to break ground in June 2013.

In addition to that much-needed building renovation, McAuley has a long wish list to round out a full-fledged wellness program. On it are a robust intramural program, club sports, further expansion of Wellness Center hours, coaching and training, indoor walking and jogging track, dedicated spinning and yoga spaces, new equipment, and expansion of off-campus activities from hiking to mountain biking.

Wellness participants like Winfrey and Marquez are leading the way for the wellness revolution. When Winfrey started the program, she could barely walk up a flight of stairs. Now she can take 14 flights without pause. She ran her first 5K in September, and she's just getting started.

For Kendra Hearn, C'2014, the research she completed in Spain this summer was personal. A biology major at Spelman, Hearn was evaluating new treatments for metastatic breast cancer, a disease that has repeatedly struck her family. She's lost a grandmother, an aunt, and cousins to breast cancer, and she dedicated her summer research to a cousin who is a survivor.

"Part of what I did was for her," says the rising junior. In a laboratory at Salamanca University—the oldest university in Spain—Hearn tested new lines and combinations of inhibitors in mice models infected with HER2 breast cancer, one of the most aggressive and resistant forms of the disease. She was not alone. Among numerous Spelman students engaged in summer research was her classmate and friend Kymber Rais, C'2014, studying rheumatoid arthritis just a seven-hour bus ride away in Grenada, Spain.

Hearn was not new to laboratory work. In high school, she participated in the University of Georgia's Young Scholars Program, honing lab skills by examining disease resistance in wheat plants and wine grapes. At Spelman, the aspiring biologist has worked in the laboratory of behavioral ecologist Dr. Aditi Pai on sex selection in red flour beetles, looking at the multiple mating behavior of females and conflict of interest between the sexes.

Hearn takes a heavy load of science classes as a participant in the competitive program, Global Research and Education in Science, Technology, Engineering and Math. Now in its fourth year on campus, G-STEM prepares African-American women in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics to be engaged globally. The program, which is supported by the National Science Foundation and other support via the Title III program, gives students formal opportunities to pursue research abroad. Hearn's 10 weeks of study in Spain demonstrate how those global research experiences are opening up new possibilities for G-STEM scholars.

Previously, Hearn had planned to pursue a career in medicine, focusing on women's health. "I have always wanted to be a doctor and help people," she says. "But it wasn't until I was at Spelman that I realized another way to help people is through research."

After the summer, Hearn was inspired to continue what she started abroad. "I know that I can't expect to cure cancer in one summer," she says. "This kind of work takes years to solidify and mean something, but I'm excited to think that this may be the place where I can make a difference." Hearn's family is sure to back her decision. Each year, extended family members walk in the Susan G. Komen race to raise money for breast cancer research in their home state of Illinois, and her immediate family participates in the race in Georgia. When Hearn was unable to walk last year because of mid-term exams, she still supported the cause with a donation.

As she looks back on her summer and forward to her future, Hearn says, "I'm so grateful to have the opportunity to do this work. I feel like I'm just getting started."

"I have always wanted to be a doctor and help people, but it wasn't until I was at Spelman that I realized another way to help people is through research."

community-mi

women transform lives.

Monae Fennell, C'2015, chases her dream to become an OB/GYN and help educate women in her community about health.

Hank Aaron had a dream—to overcome poverty and racism and become one of the greatest baseball players of all time.

Monae Fennell also had a dream—to attend the same college as her grandmother and become a doctor to serve women in her community.

Both the celebrated ballplayer and the Spelman pre-med major have caught their dreams. Aaron's story is legend. During a distinguished career, he hammered in 755 homeruns, a record that overtook Babe Ruth's and held for 33 years. He went four for four, making four hits at four attempts at bat, a total of 12 times, and made the All-Star squad a record 25 times. In 1982, the child who grew up during the Great Depression in Mobile, Ala., took his place in the Major League Baseball Hall of Fame.

Fennell is just beginning to catch her dream. For as long as she can remember, she wanted to attend Spelman. Her grandmother, a sociology major at Spelman who graduated in 1969, recently retired after a long career as an elementary school teacher. "This was my number one choice, the place I had to be," says Fennell, "but I knew I absolutely needed a scholarship to go here." The former high school valedictorian is now a Spelman sophomore, thanks to a four-year scholarship from the Hank Aaron Chasing the Dream Foundation (HACDF).

Launched in 1994 on Aaron's 65th birthday, the foundation enables young people to pursue their dreams. The foundation's original goal was to support 755 dream chasers between the ages of 12 and 18 who had talents in music, sports, the arts, math, science, or computer technology. Knocking that goal out of the park, the foundation next partnered with Major League Baseball and the Boys and Girls Clubs of America to establish a 44 Forever initiative, memorializing Hank's uniform number and supporting 44 deserving teenagers each year in perpetuity. Most recently, the HACDF established the 4 for 4 program, building on Aaron's stats to endow 12 four-year college and university scholarships, including one at Spelman.

The Spelman scholarship is named in honor of Dr. June Gary Hopps, C'60, a leading authority at the University of Georgia on public policy related to women and children and a family friend of Hank Aaron and his wife, Billye. Hopps met the Aarons through her late husband, John, a fellow choir member with Billye during high school in Dallas. Their paths reconnected years later when both couples moved to Atlanta. They became close, visiting in each other's homes, sharing not only meals but also dreams. A common dream was to help young people succeed.

Fennell is the beneficiary of their vision, which is allowing her to pursue a pre-med track at Spelman combined with research. This summer she completed an internship with the Minority Biomedical Research Support - Research Initiative for Scientific Enhancement program. Funded nationally by the National Institutes of Health, MBRS-RISE prepares underrepresented minorities and women for careers in biomedical research.

Fennell got a chance to share her personal dream of becoming a practicing OB/GYN and clinical researcher with the Aarons when she attended an Atlanta Braves game that brought the Aarons together with the 4 for 4 scholars from across the country. That night, she discovered that Hank and Billye Aaron "really value education," she says, and she picked up a little insider's knowledge on the game, too.

Dr. June Gary Hopps, C'60, became a member of the Spelman College Board of Trustees in 1988, and served as the chair of the board from 1997–2004.

ALUMNAE PARTICIPATION OVER 10 YEARS

Spelman has had a big impact on many lives, including mine. I was the first in my family to leave Michigan and attend college out of state, and it was at Spelman that I began to blossom. While there, I served as a class officer, and I met my future husband at Morehouse. I later came back to serve as a class agent for reunions, and in 2006, I was honored to become a trustee of the College.

Like you, I am proud to be connected to an institution that has supported the education of African-American women for 131 years. Our sisterhood has grown strong, and we are making a difference in diverse fields, from the sciences to business and government. We are finding purposeful careers as researchers, policymakers, educators, and community leaders, among others.

Like you, I know that investing in women—and particularly Spelman women—not only makes for good business but is also good sense. Some 34% of alumnae—5,524 Spelman women—demonstrated their support for the College in 2012 by making a gift, resulting in $1,525,073 in contributions. Together, 6,860 donors made $14,405,023 in gifts that helped imbue a global mindset in all Spelman students, increase research and service-learning opportunities, and update Spelman's historic infrastructure.

I want to thank you for your gifts and for staying connected to Spelman—and I want to invite you to build on that momentum. We have to keep working hard, striving higher, and giving back to help Spelman continue to prepare young women to be tomorrow's great thinkers and leaders. Together we will demonstrate what happens when strong women unite to make an impact on individual lives and society.

Sincerely,

Rosalind Gates Brewer, C'84

Change. Means. Action

Since the launch of The Campaign for Spelman College in 2004, generous contributions from donors have had a true impact on our students. The more than $130 million in gifts to the campaign are providing invaluable means for young women to become change agents in the world.

“Spelman’s ability to continue providing an excellent education to the best and the brightest is tied directly to the generosity of our supporters,” said Kassandra Jolley, vice president, Institutional Advancement. “We are appreciative of the commitment our donors have demonstrated to the College through helping us raise more than $130 million on the way to our goal of $150 million.”

These important contributions have allowed Spelman to sustain our mission as a leading national liberal arts college for women, supporting students with scholarships, research and international travel opportunities, and infrastructure improvements. These achievements could not have been accomplished without a broad array of generous donors. In the decade since Beverly Daniel Tatum assumed the presidency of Spelman, alumnae support of the College has grown significantly. In 2002, the alumnae participation rate was 15.4 percent with annual fund contributions of $787,182. Today that rate has more than doubled, reaching a high of 41 percent in 2011, and giving to the annual fund has tripled, now more than $2.1 million each year.

Every gift has made a difference, from the $107,102 raised by the Class of 1957, who took home multiple giving awards during Reunion, to the contributions made by 65 percent of the senior class to the Senior Legacy Fund. By embracing the opportunity to begin their financial commitment to the College before they even graduate, these young women are continuing the legacy of supporting Spelman sisters who are following in their footsteps.

Corporate and foundation support this year has had a significant impact on our students. Renovations to the 90-year-old Laura Spelman Rockefeller Hall were funded primarily through private philanthropy. A challenge grant from the Kresge Foundation helped spur gifts from alumnae and friends to turn Laura Spelman, one of the oldest buildings on campus, into an energy-efficient green building. Funding received for the Gordon-Zeto Center for Global Education allowed more than 200 students to travel abroad this year, which aligns with Spelman’s 2015 strategic plan goal of providing more global experiences to students.

Thoughtful contributors ensure Spelman’s legacy of empowering women to recognize their purpose and realize their potential of becoming global leaders and pioneering thinkers as they change the world in meaningful ways.

Spelman College gratefully acknowledges the following contributors for providing gift commitments of $25,000 and above to The Campaign for Spelman College during the period July 1, 2004 through June 30, 2012.

Keva Wright Berry, C'79

I give to Spelman mostly out of a sense of loyalty and indebtedness. As I attribute much of my success in life to the experiences and education I received at Spelman, I find that it is only fitting that I give back so that other young women can have the opportunity to have their lives so shaped. I give to Spelman because it's Spelman!

During commencement, Oprah Winfrey shared three pieces of advice with the Class of 2012: Know who you are and what you want; find a way to serve; and always do the right thing.

True Blue

New Gift Society Acknowledges Consistent Support

The College is introducing a new recognition society to acknowledge loyal donors for their continuous support. Alumnae and friends who make gifts for at least five consecutive fiscal years will qualify for membership in the new True Blue Society. Individuals will be listed in the annual Philanthropy Report with a symbol denoting their status as a consistent donor. Members will also receive a small token of appreciation from the College at five-year intervals. Individuals who have made contributions for five or more years consecutively will become charter members of the society at the end of the current fiscal year.

“Ongoing annual support strengthens Spelman overall and makes it possible for us to continue providing the exceptional academic experience for which Spelman is known.”

After a review of the current gift society structure, there was a desire to show special appreciation to those who have embraced the Every Woman...Every Year! message and to highlight the significance and impact of consecutive giving. “Consistent support is the engine that drives Spelman,” says Stacey Lyons, director of donor relations. “Just like an individual, the College has a need for resources every single year. Ongoing annual support strengthens Spelman overall and makes it possible for us to continue providing the exceptional academic experience for which Spelman is known.”

Membership in the True Blue Society will be renewable annually. No minimum gift amount will be required for admittance into the society and gifts may be directed to any fund or area of the College. For more information about the True Blue Society, please contact the Office of Donor Relations at (404) 270-5063.

Gwendolyn Walker Garrison, Ph.D., C'54

I give to Spelman because I believe in Spelman and her determination to give her students a chance to change the world. Now I will give because my 12-year-old granddaughter told her teacher in class her goal is to attend Spelman. How proud I am of my future Spelmanite.

I will continue to correspond with my classmates, reminding them of our 60th anniversary and to send monetary gifts now. I will do the same for all of my Spelman sisters at my church. I will definitely support my granddaughter in reaching her dream of attending Spelman.

Ways to Give

Whether you choose to give to the Annual Fund, make a leadership gift of $25,000 or more, provide a gift or grant through your business or foundation, or plan to make a future gift, Spelman College appreciates your commitment to the education of our extraordinary students. You can make your gifts through the following vehicles:

Ways of Giving:

- Outright gifts yield immediate tax benefits and have an immediate impact on Spelman.
- Various annuities pay you income now and preserve the principal for later use for Spelman.
- Bequest intentions provide a living testament to your desire to invest in generations of young women who sustain our tradition of achievement. Donors of a certain age who document their commitment by naming Spelman as beneficiary in their estate plans will receive recognition in The Campaign for Spelman.

Cash gifts and pledges: The easiest and most popular form of giving, these contributions can be made online; by electronic funds transfer (EFT); recurring credit card deductions (RCC); phone; or mail. For as little as $10 a month, the RCC option allows you to set up regular, automatic payments charged to the card that you select, and your EFT gifts to Spelman will be automatically deducted from your checking or savings account.

Gifts of appreciated securities: Sometimes more valuable than outright gifts, these contributions give you an immediate tax deduction and do not incur capital gains. The sale of these transferred securities enables Spelman to support needed initiatives.

Gifts of real property: When you deed your home/vacation home, undeveloped property, or commercial building to Spelman, these gifts also give you an immediate tax deduction and do not incur capital gains. Spelman may either use your property for the College or sell it and apply the proceeds to achieve its strategic goals.

Matching gifts: Matching gifts can be used to double your gift to Spelman College. If you are employed with a matching gift company, please contact your company's human resources department for instructions.

To learn more about gift opportunities, please contact the Office of Development at (866) 512-1690 or visit www.spelman.edu.

defining impact

Adrienne T. Hunter Brown, C'2005

I give to Spelman because others gave while I was a student. I am carrying on a legacy. I will continue to give and hope that one day my future daughter is able to have the life-changing experiences that Spelman provided me.

Giving, no matter how small, can truly make a huge difference. Even if you are only able to give a little here and a little there, please know that your contributions are being used to set admirable standards for women of color.

defining impact
Leanna L. Pearson, C'2010

I give to Spelman because of my Spelman Honor Pledge, which reads: "I endorse the ideals of honor and integrity by upholding the trust bestowed upon me as a member of the 125th class of Spelman College." Spelman trusted in me so I must uphold my trust in her.

To inspire others to give, I will share the opportunities I was able to experience while at Spelman and the value of giving back so that future generations will be able to partake in opportunities I can only imagine in my dreams.

defining impact

Judge Brenda H. Cole, C'63

Judge Brenda Cole has included Spelman in her will, and contributes to an annual scholarship for students who will be pursuing law degrees.

"I give to Spelman because of the many gifts that Spelman has given to me over the years. I give to help make the wonderful educational opportunities Spelman offers available to other young women. I give because I am proud of the significant contributions that Spelman makes to its students, its graduates, and to this world."

Class Day 2012: Seniors join alumnae in the March Through the Arch, symbolizing their leaving the College and entering into greater service beyond the gates of Spelman.

defining impact
Jennifer Lesleigh Moore, C'2005

I give to Spelman because we provide a great education — one that can never be duplicated. However, there are so many young women who are not able to attend because of the price tag.

We must stand up and take ownership in our beloved Spelman. If no one supports our College, then the doors that Ms. Giles and Ms. Packard opened in 1881 will be closed forever. Reducing our financial need takes educating one Spelman sister at a time.

I give back to Spelman because of all the amazing opportunities that Spelman has given me. These opportunities include my Bonner Community Service scholarship, access to the William J. Clinton internship, networking, and so many more amazing experiences.

I hope to inspire others to give by continuing to stay involved no matter where I land post-graduation. I have made a choice to change the world and plan to do that through non-profit work while carrying Spelman's lessons with me.

I give to Spelman because I want others to be afforded the opportunity to experience the same inspiring, warm environment in which I matured into a young woman and became prepared for the world of work.

I will inspire others to give and make an impact by spreading the word to my classmates. As we reminisce about our time there, we talk about how so many young African-American women can benefit from a Spelman education.
