Joyce Thornton's giving journey to an endowed scholarship

What More Will Spelman Achieve?

Every day since I began my tenure as president, I have seen, heard, or experienced something that affirms my conviction that I am at the right place, at the right time, for the right reason.

During New Student Orientation, I watched with excitement as our first-year students entered Spelman's gates for the first time, filled with hopes and aspirations for the future and ready to take on the world. I empathized with the students' parents and guardians as they said bittersweet goodbyes to the beloved daughters they were leaving in our care.

As the semester progressed, I marveled at the enthusiasm of these incredibly impressive young women as they made their way across campus to their classes, labs, study groups and extracurricular activities. I felt tremendous gratitude for the dedicated faculty and staff I know are working to support our students academically and personally through their Spelman experience.

I am amazed at the myriad items that come across my desk needing attention, and I feel the rightness of being at Spelman. My introduction into this community has been heartwarming and exhilarating, and I am deeply honored to be at the helm of such an outstanding institution.

Coming to Spelman truly is making a choice to change the world.

My choice to help change the world was fostered at an early age. I grew up in a family who valued academic excellence not just for the sake of getting a good education, but also for using that education to make a difference in the world.

I came of age in a time of activism and rapid social change inspired by the civil rights movement, women's movement, and antiapartheid and antiwar protests. I saw the power of collective action creating positive change and wanted to be part of something bigger than myself.

I chose to pursue medicine and public health because I believed they could equip me to make a practical difference in people's lives. For several decades at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, CARE and Chicago Community Trust, I tried to use my gifts to cultivate greater social justice and equity in our country and the world.

Now at Spelman, I am convinced my experience, skills, energy, and passion will contribute to furthering our mission as a global leader in the education of women of African descent.

Thanks to the efforts of the presidents who came before me, Spelman remains a thriving institution, consistently holding rank as the nation's No.1 HBCU and among the top liberal arts colleges. So, for me, our critical leadership questions are not what, but what more?

» What more can we do to ensure that a strong liberal arts education is the foundation for shaping lifelong learners who are entrepreneurial, analytical, tech savvy and have an interdisciplinary mindset? This is whether they choose to study the arts, natural sciences and mathematics, humanities, social sciences or education.

» What more can we do to grow our financial resources to ensure that inability to pay is not the barrier to getting a Spelman education? Also, what more can we do to support students in their learning and living environments?

» What more can we do to make sure that the West End Atlanta community we live in prospers? This includes not displacing people who for years and generations have also called this neighborhood home?

» What more can we do to bring the world to Spelman and Spelman to the world, so our students are prepared to be true global citizens and embrace diversity in all its forms?

» What more can we do to raise our voices and help shape dialogue on the critical challenges of our time, 'in the room,' where those conversations happen?

I look forward to listening and learning and working with students, faculty, staff, alumnae, board members, parents and friends. Together, we will answer these questions, and more, as we join forces to strengthen Spelman for today and position her for tomorrow.

YOU HAVE A 'CHOICE TO CHANGE THE WORLD'

In May, Stacey Abrams, C'95, lawyer, author, and a 2022 Georgia gubernatorial candidate, delivered Spelman's commencement address to an audience of more than 8,000, including 494 graduating students. Abrams encouraged the future world-changers to 1) Be bold in ambitions because that is what is taught at Spelman; 2) Learn lessons not losses because losses are lessons; and 3) Know what you believe because you will fight for what you believe.

"You have a choice to change the world, so let's get it done," she finished.

HAVING THEIR SAY

SIS Celebrates 20 Years of Preserving Stories of Black Women Elders

BY CONNIE GREEN FREIGHTMAN

In 1999, Gloria Wade Gayles, Ph.D., had an epiphany.

While in New Orleans for a two-year stint as a visiting scholar at Dillard University, she noticed Black women elders singing and dancing. They were everywhere, performing at jazz festivals and funeral processions, holding court in nightclubs and churches, and strutting their stuff in Mardi Gras parades.

Awestruck by their performances, Gayles came to a realization.

“It was at Dillard where I became aware of elders in my history and my culture,” she said. “I awakened to the fact I hadn’t included them in my research.”

Upon her return to Spelman College, the English professor shifted her research focus from Black American literature to age studies and oral history methodology. In September 2002, she founded Spelman’s Independent Scholars Oral History Project, or SIS, to amplify stories of Black women elders and foster intergenerational bonds.

As SIS marks its 20th anniversary, Gayles said she couldn’t be prouder of what the young scholars have accomplished to open the lens of age and raise awareness of ageism as a social injustice.

The project has received local and national accolades for groundbreaking achievements. Two years after SIS’ founding, the Atlanta City Council issued a proclamation declaring Sept. 28, 2004, Spelman’s Independent Scholars Day. In 2009, Spelman scholars received first prize in student research at the HBCU Association of Gerontology annual meeting.

Moreover, SIS is the only oral history project in the nation that has published two student-edited anthologies of interviews with Black women elders and an online journal of student writings.

“Age is a lens we must open in the 21st century. People are living longer,” said Gayles, who also is the founding director of RESONANCE, a choral performance group at Spelman. “Because stories help define us as a people, our history and our culture, the young scholars have had their lenses opened, and they’ve come to appreciate that.”

Over the past two decades, more than 140 students from different academic disciplines have participated in the oral history project. They have collected stories of more than 150

Black women elders from all walks of life, including domestics, teachers, librarians, entrepreneurs, ministers and artists. Their collecting has taken them on research trips to Albany, Atlanta, Newton, Sapelo Island, and Savannah in Georgia; Talladega, Alabama; Memphis, Tennessee; New Orleans, West Africa, Jamaica and the Bahamas.

During the fall semester, students attend seminars and community lectures. They learn oral history interview techniques before connecting with a woman of wisdom who becomes their mentor. In the spring, they transcribe tapes, write, proofread, and finalize research reports and essays that explore issues of ageism, such as health disparities, employment discrimination, and the impact of incarceration.

The young scholars and elders meet for at least four, one-hour interviews, sharing stories and encouragement over cups of tea and sometimes homecooked meals.

From these gatherings, the project has recorded and preserved 315 DVDs and CDs, capturing 600 hours of intergenerational conversations conducted nationally and globally, and created 20 student-produced documentaries highlighting elders and students. SIS also has amassed a collection of memorabilia donated by women elders or their families.

After conversations with her SIS mentee, Zelma Allegra Payne, Ph.D., fulfilled a longtime dream to write a book about her aunt, a registered nurse who started a hospital for Black people in Montgomery, Alabama, during the Jim Crow era.

“Stories are powerful. They are cultural texts,” Gayles said. “The experience these students have in this project prepares them for a different kind of life than they would have had otherwise. And that is a life that is aware of challenge, aware of faith and aware of the tenacity of will that our grandmothers and mothers had.”

Anya Davis, C’2024, wasn’t quite sure what to expect when she became a young scholar in the fall of 2021. The first-class discussion on Black Lives Aged Matter was an eye-opener.

“I learned so much. Ageism was something I never thought about,” said Davis, a comparative women’s studies major from Atlanta.

The program inspired her to write about both of her grandmothers. Davis chose her paternal grandmother, Delorise Davis, SIS young scholar Anya Davis, C'2024, with grandmother Delorise Davis before junior prom. Anya said her grandmother has always been her greatest mentor.

SIS young scholars listen to Callie Terrell, who was still working as a beautician in Memphis at 101 years old. Terrell, who died in 2021 at age 102, was believed to be the oldest licensed hair stylist in Tennessee.

Pioneering fashion designer Annie Jewell Moore, C'1943, was featured in the second SIS anthology of stories from Black women elders.

Pictured is Gloria Wade-Gayles, Ph.D., and scholars Lauren Clark, C'2010, and Brandice Brown, C'2016.

SIS scholar Naima Castaneda Isaac, C'2022, is pictured with Joyce Johnson, D.Mus. Dr. Johnson is professor emerita of music at Spelman College where she taught for more than 50 years. She has been the organist at Spelman since 1955.

who lives in Atlanta, as her interviewee and mentor for the project. She then wrote an essay about traveling to Chicago for her maternal grandmother's funeral in 2020 and finding peace after encountering an older woman at her grandmother's favorite hot dog eatery.

"At Spelman, we learn about Black women, but older women are not something we discuss. I would love to be the person who keeps this program alive," said Davis, who plans to attend law school. "Ageism is really a big issue that no one talks about. I would love to advocate for older people. The relationship I had with my grandmothers makes me want to advocate."

Regarding the next steps for SIS, Gayles has three goals. She would like to publish a third anthology; organize the SIS archives; and create a film that chronicles SIS history, accomplishments, and celebrations of intergenerational bonding, such as learning, worshipping, walking, and dancing with elders.

Gayles loves to dance. In a fitting tribute to its beginnings, SIS kicked off its 20th-anniversary festivities in September 2022 with a Dancing With the Elders performance.

"They are not sitting in rocking chairs," she said. "There's a movement afoot to redefine what justice is across lines of race, class, gender, orientation and age."

‘THE PIANO LESSON’

LaTanya Richardson Jackson Plays All the Right Keys as the First Woman to Direct August Wilson Work on Broadway

BY LARRY CALHOUN

LaTanya Richardson Jackson, C’71, first met renowned playwright August Wilson in 1987 when her husband, Samuel L. Jackson, performed as the original “Boy Willie” in “The Piano Lesson” at Yale Repertory Theatre.

As an artist focusing on acting at that time, Richardson Jackson never imagined being at the helm as director of a Wilson play. Certainly not on Broadway. And certainly not as the first woman to do so.

Set in 1936 Pittsburgh, “The Piano Lesson” tells the story of conflict between a brother and sister over a family heirloom piano carved with the images of their ancestors. The brother wants to sell it to buy farmland; the sister wants to keep it for its heritage.

In a phone interview with this writer, Richardson Jackson shared her thoughts about Wilson and the play:

What do you remember most about your first meeting with August Wilson?

RJ: I asked him when was he going to start writing stories about women like he writes about men. He jokingly said he will write about women when he can understand what they are saying.

What do you feel is the influence of Wilson’s body of work, not just in Black theater, but American theater?

RJ: August Wilson is an American playwright — not a Black American playwright. We don’t say Jewish playwright or Italian playwright. We say American playwright. Wilson is on par with Shakespeare, and Wilson’s text is so succinctly drawn that it is classical. He wrote about our people and believed that Black people deserved to have our stories told in literature because we were worthy and credible.

Danielle Brooks plays Berniece Charles.

What was August Wilson's message to the audience in the play?

RJ: August Wilson told an American story, the quest for the American Dream, which is a universal theme. I tried not to just revive the play to be the same as previous productions. I wanted to re-imagine it, this broken home that comes together in the end. I wanted to open up this metaphor and show how racism is constantly at our backs, impacting family relationships and life choices.

How did you receive the offer to be at the helm of this production?

RJ: Life is a gift. Denzel Washington brought the offer to me. His son, John David, and Sam were looking at the play, too, for roles. So, I said there you have it. We all signed on.

How did you feel about directing your husband?

RJ: Well, I have directed him on stage before. I live with Sam, so I direct him every day. (We have a laugh.) I didn't think it would be so difficult for him to take notes during rehearsals, and he warmed up to the idea.

Is there a difference to your approach in directing a Broadway production versus a regional play?

RJ: Resources. Resources make a difference. But as a director, I approach the regionals like I did Broadway. I still have to tell a story, regardless of the budget. The playwright gives you the story, but the director has to tell it.

As the first female to direct an August Wilson play on Broadway, can gender offer a different perspective on how a play is directed?

RJ: Gender always offers a different perspective. Since women historically have been treated differently, as second class, our point of view is different. Women think inside. And I'm excited for the growing diversity on Broadway and for more female voices. Besides, I'm a woman's woman. I learned that from Spelman. Spelman gives you the mirror to see yourself and all you can be.

The Tony Award-nominated actress ("A Raisin in the Sun") reflected more on her love for the College, specifically the Fine Arts Building, where she and Jackson learned their craft. The Jacksons recently made a $5 million gift to renovate the campus theater and supporting spaces to be named the LaTanya Richardson Jackson and Samuel L. Jackson Performing Arts Center.

"The Piano Lesson," with its all-star cast, has received critical acclaim and rave reviews from theatergoers. It runs through Jan. 29, 2023, at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre in New York City.

Making Black Women Portrait Artists Center Stage Featuring ‘Black American Portraits’

BY LIZ ANDREWS, PH.D.

Following its debut at Los Angeles County Museum of Art in 2021, the group exhibition, Black American Portraits, travels to Atlanta’s Spelman College Museum of Fine Art. Co-curated by Liz Andrews, executive director, Spelman College Museum of Fine Art, and Christine Y. Kim, Britton Family Curator-at-Large, (both formerly of LACMA), the exhibition reframes portraiture to center

Black American subjects, sitters and spaces. This time placing Black women portrait artists center stage.

From the 1800s to present day, the exhibition will feature 120 works to chronicle the ways Black Americans have used portraiture to envision themselves in their own eyes. New to the exhibition at Spelman College Museum of Fine Art will be four acquisitions: a new painting by Calida Rawles, C’98, alongside two works by Augusta Savage and a photograph by Sheila Pree Bright.

“Black American Portraits” will run from Feb. 8 through June 30, 2023, at the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art.

QUEENS OF THEIR DOMAIN

Navigating workplace and corporate landscapes can involve complex moves. Like in the game of chess, in the game of career juggernauts, the queen is the most powerful, steering through difficulties with the ease and grace of a true power broker.

On the following pages, read about widely published, law-practicing, social-influencing, disruptive alumnae leaders who make calculated gambits, taking advantage of their positioning in government, law, winemaking, medicine, education, activism and social imprints to make a difference in the world. Their power source – Spelman College – is identical when they speak from whence it came. Confident, disciplined, progressive and unabashedly driven, they are the queens of their domain.

Lisa Cook Becomes First Black Woman on Federal Reserve Board

BY TARA WOODIN

Lisa D. Cook, C’86, has had many historical achievements that date back to her time at Spelman.

She was Spelman’s first Marshall Scholar. She is the fourth Black economist to serve on the American Economic Association Board. And, she was recently named as one of “19 Black Economists to Celebrate” by Fortune magazine.

Now she has another historical achievement to add to her already impressive roster. She has recently been confirmed as the first Black woman on the Federal Reserve Board.

“I am humbled and honored to have been nominated by President Biden to be a member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System,” Cook said at her confirmation. “The sense of discipline, hope, and mission instilled in me by my family has taken me from Spelman College to Oxford, the Hoover Institution, and Harvard, but I have never forgotten where I came from and the dedicated teachers who supported me.”

Her journey began with her time at Spelman where she graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor’s degree in philosophy. This was just one of the first steps in the long process to becoming Federal Reserve Governor.

“My time at Spelman College was transformative,” said Cook. “I am indebted to the entire community — professors, administrators, fellow students and alumnae — for the generosity, guidance and support I received to expand and sharpen my curiosity at every juncture.”

Cook eventually earned a Ph.D. in economics from the University of California, Berkeley, and continued her post-doctoral studies with fellowships from Harvard and Stanford. Her drive for knowledge throughout each of her scholastic adventures drew recognition from her Spelman sisters.

“Even as a young undergraduate student, I instinctively knew that Lisa was destined for a remarkable future,” said former Spelman classmate, Sharon D. Toomer, C’86. “I most recall her curious spirit, sharp-minded focus and discipline, with a maturity beyond her years. Among our peers, she stood out that way.”

Her path to the Federal Reserve Board continued from her early career through her nomination. She served as a senior economist in the Obama administration’s Council of Economic Advisers from 2011 to 2012. In 2020, she became a volunteer member of the Biden presidential transition agency review team to support Federal Reserve transition efforts.

In 2021, she was elected for a three-year term on the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago’s board of directors. She was then pushed forward into her current position as Federal Reserve governor first by a nomination from President Biden.

Cook received her nomination after a party-line 50-50 Senate vote with a final tie-breaking vote from Vice President Kamala Harris to elect her to serve on the board for the remainder of the 14-year term of the seat previously held by Janet Yellen.

The focus of much of her education, research and work has been to uplift and support economic growth.

“I am also grateful for the opportunity to have spent some of my academic career in public service,” said Cook. “The ideal of working toward something greater than oneself was taught, encouraged and demonstrated from the moment I walked through Spelman’s gates.”

Blake Gifford Brings Luxury Experiences to Everyone

BY KIA SMITH, C'2004

Flawless. Stylish. Stunning. Those are the three words that come to mind as you engage with the digital content of Blake Gifford, C'2009. The Chicago-based attorney and content creator, who specializes in fashion, beauty and lifestyle content, inspires us all to take up space through her glamorous, yet grounded, content.

"I want to bring luxury experiences to everyone because I feel like everyone deserves it," said Gifford.

She draws inspiration from her experience growing up in the foster-care system.

"I remember being a little girl and my towels were always threadbare and bleach-stained and mismatched," recalled Gifford. "And in the moment, it feels like a small thing but over time, it sends you this message about what you deserve."

Gifford launched a personal blog in 2009 as she was graduating from Spelman College.

"It was really just therapy," she recalled. "I was just talking about my life and trying to figure out what I was going to do next."

Gifford delayed attending law school and was working for Americorps, but soon the lifelong learner and avid student felt the urge to return to school. She enrolled at New York University, where she received a master's in social work before earning a law degree from Tulane University in 2015.

While in law school, Gifford began shifting her digital presence from a personal blog to a digital lifestyle brand in order to develop a portfolio that would help her enter the field of intellectual property law.

"I thought that I would be my own portfolio," she said. "I would show [other influencers] that I was capable of building a brand and that I understood trademarks. But I didn't end up having to go that route."

During law school, Gifford's blog, which developed a significant following bolstered by fashion placements in Essence.com and hellobeautiful.com, became the digital lifestyle brand of her dreams.

Now the content creator, who has worked with Nike, Armani Beauty and Grand Marnier, she is working to make luxury accessible to us all.

In October 2022, Gifford released a fashion collection through Amazon's The Drop, which produces influencer-designed, limited-edition fashion collections inspired by international street style and the influencer's personal style.

Gifford's platform explores her passions for fashion, travel, home decor, social issues and her adorable dog, Bash. She also is working to pivot from influencing to developing and selling products.

"I would love more than anything to just be in the home space," said Gifford. "I want to be a household brand. I want paint, wallpaper, sheets, towels, home decor, all of the things!"

"I want to help people create homes that feel like a respite from the stresses of life. I just want people to come home, put on a nice robe, light some candles, and crawl into their bed and just feel good about themselves and relax for the day."

Theodora Lee Is Queen of the Vineyards

BY KIA SMITH, C'2004

Located in California's prestigious Yorkville Highlands of the Anderson Valley, sits Theopolis Vineyards, a small-lot vineyard and handcrafted winery established in 2003 by Theodora Lee, C'84.

Lee, nicknamed Theo-Patra, Queen of the Vineyards, has managed to develop award-winning wines while maintaining a full-time career as a senior partner and trial lawyer at San Francisco-based Littler Mendelson, the world's largest labor and employment law firm.

Despite the multitasker's success in the wine business, Lee did not plan to become a vintner. She entered Spelman College with aspirations of working in electoral politics. But, after a number of internships in the Texas Legislature, the Georgia Legislature, and Sen. Sam Nunn's Capitol Hill office, Lee determined that politics was not for her and instead began to pursue a legal career. After graduating from the University of Texas Law School in 1987, she joined Littler Mendelson.

"I've been practicing law for 35 years, and I still love it. I find it very rewarding," said Lee.

Content with her law career, grape farming was not a part of Lee's plan until she began spending time with her law school mentors.

"When I came to practice law in San Francisco, one of my colleagues, Barbara Oddone, and her husband, Pier, invited me to their vineyard in Dry Creek Valley. Pier let me drive his tractor in that vineyard, and that's what sold me. I thought, yes, I can be a farmer," recalled Lee. "It reminded me of my Texas upbringing, and it meant I could have a second home. I decided I wanted to be a grape farmer back in the 80s, but it took me until 2001 to be able to afford farmland."

Lee's only goal was to sell grapes to award-winning wineries, which she did until 2012. That year, a storm forced her to harvest grapes before they reached the agreed upon brix or sugar level. The buyer rejected the purchase of her early batch. Lee was left with 10 tons of grapes and no buyer. She decided to have the grapes crushed herself, saved for two years to buy the bottles and caps, and bottled the vintage of 2012 in 2014.

"That wine won gold at Sunset Magazine," Lee exclaimed. "So, I've been bottling commercially since 2014. The first year, I bottled 300 cases, and now I'm bottling 2,500 cases."

Jayne Morgan's Communications Are a Formula for Success

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

At the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020, Dr. Jayne Morgan, C'84, immediately moved to save lives. She vividly recalled the Piedmont Healthcare Corp. experiencing PPE shortages and the hospital scrambling to treat an unprecedented surge of patients. She and her colleagues raced to find medical therapeutics while feverishly working to keep their patients and staff safe from a deadly virus the global medical community had never experienced.

An innovation leader, entrepreneur, on-air medical expert and CNN medical contributor, Morgan, a cardiologist by training, now leads the COVID Task Force at Piedmont Healthcare in Atlanta, the largest healthcare system in Georgia. She also is a member of the Health Equity and COVID Task Force for the state of Georgia and supports the Department of Health in its series of "Ask the Experts."

In her role as a COVID vaccine expert, Morgan analyzes the science and data from Piedmont and national sources, and drives efforts at addressing vaccine hesitancy via education to staff, stakeholders, media, and the external community.

Redeployed from her role as director of Innovation for Piedmont Healthcare, Morgan seized the opportunity to combine her medical expertise and strong communication and teaching skills to effectively lead Piedmont through uncharted territory.

"There really wasn't much direction or scope given to the role because everybody was busy and working hard, and we needed competent people in place who could move things forward," said Morgan.

"I decided that effective communication was going to be key. I could clearly see what was happening on social media," Morgan continued. "People were getting all kinds of crazy information. Vaccines were under development, and part of what I needed to do with the COVID Task Force was to simplify everything for everyone."

"I wanted to untangle COVID and explain it in terms that people could understand, but not just with social media. I went out into the community and met with Girl Scout groups, large companies like Microsoft and Google, and small groups in church basements. There was nothing off limits. We opened up vaccine clinics to provide education. That's how communication began in the middle of the COVID crisis."

Jayne Morgan, C'84, supported a medical and biotech invention that received a $23 million outside investment.

Since the pandemic, she has worked tirelessly to educate, empower and inform audiences with her distinct brand of clear, effective communication with easy-to-understand content.

In 2021, she created the "Stairwell Chronicles," a series featuring quick, 60-second videos that explain current knowledge about healthcare and science. The series grew a cult-like following because of its conversational, understandable manner.

"It wasn't shoving anything down people's throats; it was me understanding what the community's needs were and doing it as Dr. Jayne Morgan independent of my role at Piedmont," she said. "This is why I sit on the stairs. It's my house. I'm wearing my clothes and not a white coat. I'm not affiliated with anything. I am talking to you like a sister, an aunt, your hairdresser, a neighbor, a mother, just a regular person with all these credentials who talks with you. But the point is, you see me like you would see a trusted friend to provide that information."

Also, each month, she goes live for 30 minutes, taking a deeper dive into other relevant topics ranging from Monkeypox and menopause to clinical trials and cardiovascular disease.

Prior to her video series and leadership role with Piedmont's COVID Task Force, Morgan's journey led to a path of limitless opportunities. For starters, she created the Piedmont Accelerator, securing the first-ever licensing of a medical device developed entirely internally. This allowed Piedmont to receive its first-ever royalties. She also supported a second medical and biotech invention receiving a $23 million outside investment. Prior to that, she led the health system's cardiovascular research program.

"Interestingly, my path started to change later in my career," noted Morgan. "I knew exactly what I wanted to do when I was younger. But when I got older, I started exploring other things. I became a cardiologist just as I had planned, but then I started getting interested in research, working in labs, and not seeing patients at all.

"As a doctor, I never knew you could do something like that," she continued. "I got involved in clinical trials and only saw patients within research. I began to lead study sites at large, major hospital systems like Piedmont. Then, I began my journey into biotechnology and venture capitalism and start-up companies in the biotech sector. So none of those paths were known to me. At the time, I only thought doctors treated patients. I didn't understand there were other opportunities available."

As her professional career continues to grow and evolve, Morgan is especially thankful to Spelman for nurturing and supporting her confidence and her will to achieve and succeed.

Her mother, Gwendolyn Middlebrooks, Ph.D., C'61, is a tenured faculty member and administrator in the education department at Spelman. Morgan went on to earn her medical degree from Michigan State University.

In addition to being a dedicated physician, mother and wife, she is especially proud of her service to others.

"Ultimately, I would like to be known as a humanitarian — someone with empathy and understanding for the human state and human life," she said. "My goal is to always serve humanity."

Pamela Scott-Johnson Empowers the Educational Enterprise

BY ADRIENNE S. HARRIS

Pamela Scott-Johnson, Ph.D., C'82, provost and senior vice president for academic affairs and professor of psychology at Monmouth University in West Long Branch, New Jersey, believes her role as a higher education administrator is to empower the educational enterprise to work for everyone.

"I want to be a part of making that change happen," said Scott-Johnson, who is a champion of student-centered curricula and faculty-oriented research and pedagogy. "I want to not just be in the room where it happens, but to be part of the voice that moves higher education forward."

Scott-Johnson developed her deep regard for the value of education growing up in Newberry, South Carolina. Her mother was one of the community's first Black women to teach high-school mathematics, chemistry and physics. Her aunt taught mathematics at the local middle school.

After a trip to Atlanta to attend a Christmas carol concert by Morehouse and Spelman colleges, Scott-Johnson was so convinced to attend Spelman that it was the only college to which she applied. She planned to major in political science, but after taking an introduction to psychology course, discovered a new passion.

"I realized I was more interested in psychology and human behavior. I also started to be more interested in physiology, which is how I got into neuroscience," said Scott-Johnson, who after graduating magna cum laude with a bachelor's degree in psychology went on to earn a master's and doctoral degrees in psychology and neuroscience from Princeton University.

Scott-Johnson credits Spelman with providing her an outstanding liberal arts education that included opportunities to hold student leadership positions, participate in a summer internship at the National Institutes of Health, engage with a mentor through the Corporate Women's Roundtable, and study with outstanding Spelman faculty.

"I had the privilege of being around a powerhouse of Spelman women who were pillars in their field," she said. "I really had excellent training."

Scott-Johnson began her career by spending nine years as a senior research scientist for Kraft General Foods, where she managed academic research and was an expert on taste and smell.

Just as she was thinking about leaving the corporate world, Scott-Johnson received two job offers: one to join the faculty at the University of Massachusetts; the other to join the faculty at Spelman. She chose Spelman where, as assistant professor of physiology, she focused much of her work on ensuring access and equity for Black women in the sciences.

"Spelman had become part of Project Kaleidoscope [a program dedicated to empowering STEM faculty as a way to graduate more students in STEM fields], and I started to look at how we could strengthen courses in the department," she said. "We redesigned a lot of the Spelman curriculum around science knowledge."

After a decade at Spelman, Scott-Johnson accepted an appointment at Morgan State University, where she served as interim dean of the College of Liberal Arts, professor and chair of the department of psychology, and founding director of the psychometrics graduate program. After Morgan, she joined California State University, Los Angeles, where she was dean of the College of Natural and Social Sciences.

When Scott-Johnson was approached about going to Monmouth, she wondered why she was being led to serve at a private, historically White institution – especially given her work at HBCUs and a racially and ethnically diverse public institution. A deciding factor in accepting the position was her conviction that a commitment to educational access and equity for minorities is not at odds with a commitment to developing all students as leaders.

“When I hear people not articulate leadership for White students, I believe those students are being underserved,” she said. “Their perceived privilege doesn’t mean they necessarily have the heart to do the things they aren’t already poised to do. If we don’t build their leadership capacity, they go into the world without the multicultural context and the willingness to grasp and see another person’s point of view.”

Scott-Johnson’s focus on developing leaders extends beyond college and university campuses. She has published widely in professional journals and held numerous leadership positions in organizations such as the American Psychological Association, American Association of Colleges and Universities, and Higher Education Resource Services.

While mentoring coaches in Project Kaleidoscope, Scott-Johnson met Pamela Leggett-Robinson, Ph.D., founder and executive director of PLR Consulting, a customized-services firm providing program development, grant writing, project management and dissemination. The two women became fast friends and collaborators on two book chapters, including disruptive leadership.

“Pamela Scott-Johnson is truly the epitome of what a disruptive leader should be,” said Leggett-Robinson. “People think disruption is bad, but disruption just means something different from the cultural norms. She is a fan of higher education, but [also] of higher education moving in a direction that serves all people.”

To that end, Scott-Johnson enlists disruption in her higher education platform to serve all people, tearing down the status quo and making inclusivity the norm.

“My approach has always been all hands on deck,” she said. “When you look at our country, we have created some hands on deck, which is why the world is teetering. I am committed to a world and a country where people’s education matters for how we all work together on the problems that need to be solved.”

Chanel Tyler Creates Diverse and Inclusive Avenues of Progress for YouTube

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

An accomplished and dynamic leader in the technology and beauty industries, Chanel Tyler, C'2010, is perfectly positioned to share advice with other young Black women looking to follow in her footsteps.

Dream big.

Don't allow anyone or anything to limit you.

And be open to new possibilities.

Tyler knows what she speaks. As the global lead for Partnerships and Strategy at YouTube, she has employed each of these gems of wisdom in a convoluted path that started in banking and has ended with her becoming a powerful influencer and digital creator who manages $136 million in revenue for top endemic beauty, fashion and lifestyle creators.

She also oversees a team of strategic partner managers who focuses on building, managing, and developing the businesses of top and rising talent. Beauty influencers like Jackie Aina, for example, represent the top 10% of creators on YouTube's Diverse Creator Communities and whose businesses Tyler is responsible for growing and scaling.

As one of the few Black women in this space, Tyler remains steadfast and committed to creating diverse, inclusive, and equitable environments via social media within the beauty and technology sector.

"I've been really proactive about ensuring and encouraging inclusivity and diversity within the teams I'm on and within the businesses I sit in," said Tyler, a native of Chicago who previously led new business strategies among multicultural audiences as director of Local and Cultural Relevancy for North America at The Estée Lauder Cos.

"YouTube is a hyper-inclusive place where you find belonging and community. My goal is for the platform to reclaim its stake in beauty and return to its roots as a truly inclusive leader in the industry for this particular content category," she emphasized. "I also want YouTube to be the leader in how we help create more equitable opportunities for creators and influencers."

As Tyler described it, her journey to the tech and beauty industry is "nothing short of incredible." An economics major at Spelman, she decided to pursue banking. Following graduation, she began a career with J.P.Morgan as an analyst, a role that left her unfulfilled and yearning for a more creative outlet.

As she focused on switching careers, she soon began pursuing a master's in business administration at Columbia Business School.

"I remember writing my graduate school essays and I was like, 'I want to be the CMO of a luxury fashion house like Louis Vuitton or Chanel,' and that was the career trajectory I was setting off on," said Tyler. "Ultimately and funny enough, it led me to the luxury beauty industry instead. I had a few different internships while I was in business school and I interned at Saks Fifth Avenue, Oscar de la Renta — so I did get the experience I was hoping to get."

— CHANEL TYLER, C'2010

As serendipity would have it, in 2019, Tyler launched into the beauty industry and started her post-MBA career at Estée Lauder. There, she gained consumer marketing, digital, and product marketing experience. That allowed her to develop expertise in various beauty categories, including influencer content, messaging and commerce.

From there, she landed in 2020 at YouTube, which was seeking someone to run its beauty vertical.

“I switched jobs and I landed in tech,” said Tyler.

She developed, hosted and executive produced YouTube’s first ever virtual beauty event, Beauty Festival, which celebrated top creators, public figures, and brand founders who are members of YouTube’s beauty community.

“It’s been a really incredible journey to go from banking to now being on the tech side of beauty in a social media role. I never imagined that I’d end up at YouTube. That wasn’t the career path I imagined taking,” she said.

Tyler is grateful to Spelman for providing her with a firm foundation of success.

“Not only did Spelman afford me a lot of opportunities to understand my value and worth, but it also engrained a lot of confidence in me because I was able to navigate some very complex corporate environments,” said Tyler. “I went into these places confident and poised to stand up for myself. I had the educational background to really understand how to progress, get promoted, advocate for myself, and find mentors and sponsors.

“I also had community,” she continued. “Having that duality and balance in my life helped me go from level to level not only in my career, but also in my personal life.”

A wife and mother of a toddler, Tyler remains focused on her family and career alongside growing her Instagram platform and connecting with like-minded people. Her Instagram account (@buymechanel) boasts more than 25,000 followers.

“I always say I’m lucky to be pretty fulfilled in my corporate job, but I love that I have creative outlets on social media to really drive what I’m passionate about,” said Tyler.

“I’m really passionate about connecting with other women of color and talking about the best products — whether it be beauty or fashion — that are helping Black women find confidence and feel beautiful and perfect in the skin they’re in, and help them be fly and fabulous while living their best lives. I’m grateful to toggle and be successful in both of those avenues. I’d like to see more of us take up space that way.”

Kelly Veney Darnell Faces the Challenge of Finding Common Ground

BY TOM KERTSCHER

In today's polarized political environment, Kelly Veney Darnell, C'91, needs to draw on all of her experiences — as a lawyer and as a leader in a nonprofit, a school system and in banking — to be effective in what seems like an increasingly elusive goal: finding common ground.

She is chief operating officer of the Bipartisan Policy Center, a Washington think tank that works to combine “the best ideas from both parties to promote health, security, and opportunity for all Americans.”

“Policy has always been the one focus that I’ve enjoyed the most; it brings all of my different experiences to the forefront,” Veney Darnell said. “I think I’m more effective in policy now that I’ve had so much experience in running nonprofits and working in the corporate sector and practicing law. So, I bring a different lens to it. Being at a bipartisan organization, it certainly has its unique challenges.”

She doesn’t gloss over the magnitude of the challenge.

“It’s not easy. It’s very hard, and I would be Pollyanna-ish if I said that it was always effective. It’s not,” she said.

“It’s a mindset, because there are times I do not even want to speak to people who don’t represent my views, but I have to stand firm with the mission.”

Veney Darnell, who joined the Bipartisan Policy Center in April 2020, said her time at Spelman, where she majored in economics, launched her into a public policy master’s program fellowship at the University of Maryland. She also earned a law degree from American University. She is a former executive at the United Way of the National Capital Area, the D.C. office of the State Superintendent of Education and Bank of America. She also worked as an aide to former Atlanta Mayor Bill Campbell and to the late U.S. Rep. John Lewis, both Democrats.

The process Veney Darnell uses to find compromise on legislation is to create task forces on particular issues composed of experts, as well as members of Congress from both political parties. The task forces create reports and recommendations.

“The compromise happens in those task forces. We then take those recommendations and go to Capitol Hill and lobby,” she said, noting the Bipartisan Policy Center has a lobbying arm.

Savoring success in legislative accomplishments, even when it’s incremental, is crucial.

“When we look at some of the legislation that we’ve passed, it gives you hope,” Veney Darnell said. “You have to look for hope in any way you can, because there’s no question that there are people in our country who would like to destroy our democracy. And I think if you don’t say that out loud, that would be foolish. But we work with who we can, and there are people we just can’t work with, and who are not interested in working with us. You build the coalitions where you can.”

Success also requires checking one’s own policy preferences in favor of reaching a consensus.

“I recognize that if we want to get policy done, and we want to advance legislation that would be beneficial, first, to people of color, to families, to higher education institutions, then we are going to have to continue to compromise with people we may not want to speak to, and that’s the only way you get lasting legislation,” Veney Darnell said.

The successes she cites include a bipartisan infrastructure law, signed into law in November 2021, and a bipartisan gun law, signed in June 2022. The first spends on transportation systems, water systems and more; the second expands background checks, among other measures, intended to improve safety.

“IT’S LIKE ANY OTHER LOBBYING: IT’S ABOUT COMPROMISE AND IT’S ABOUT SAYING, ‘OK, WE COULDN’T GET THIS PASSED THIS TIME, BUT WE WILL WAIT,’ BECAUSE YOU HAVE TO PLAY THE LONG GAME.”

— KELLY VENEY DARNELL, C’91

Kelly Veney Darnell, C'91, draws on her experiences as a lawyer and leader in a nonprofit, a school system and in banking to be effective in striking policy deals.

Veney Darnell said some legislation, such as the gun law, didn't go as far as some people wanted, but progress is important.

"Would you rather have something rather than nothing is always the question," she said.

"We spend a lot of time getting to know lawmakers," Veney Darnell said. "It's like any other lobbying: it's about compromise and it's about saying, 'OK, we couldn't get this passed this time, but we will wait,' because you have to play the long game. You cannot be shortsighted in getting these things done. While it might not happen in this Congress, it might happen in two congresses. We are always looking at that."

Natalie Davis McKinney Advocates to Change a Community

BY TIFFANY THOMAS-TURNER

Natalie Davis McKinney, C'89, credits her Spelman education with igniting the fearless confidence she relies on as an advocate for education, social justice and community change.

Spelman opened paths she had never imagined: studying in England and France her junior year; graduating U.C. Berkeley with a juris doctorate while earning a master's in public policy from Princeton University; building the first Juvenile Justice Law Clinic at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; and helping shepherd one of the largest mergers in the history of public education as policy director for both Shelby County Schools and Memphis City Schools.

"Spelman taught me to show up in the world the way I have," said the political science major. "Spelman prepared me with the confidence to know I was speaking up for the right thing, for the right reason. It taught me, 'You can do this and more.'"

Today, McKinney is speaking up for Black families and their children in Memphis communities who have been historically blocked from economic and social opportunity. She is the founding executive director of Whole Child Strategies, a nonprofit, launched in 2017, that mobilizes community-led efforts to identify and address the root causes of systemic barriers that hinder children from arriving at school every day ready to learn.

"Sixty percent of the reasons children don't succeed in school are outside the classroom," McKinney said. "If a family doesn't have enough money to purchase uniforms, it keeps their children out of class and blocks their chance for an education."

With a focus on implementing resident-led solutions, WCS partners with local nonprofits to solve the city's most-pressing issues like unemployment, food insecurity and crime. A recent partnership with Memphis Medical District Collaborative led to a training series to help parents land good-paying jobs. Another initiative with Memphis Area Transit Authority provides free transportation to farmers' markets and grocery stores, providing a lifeline to people living in the city's food deserts.

McKinney says the nonprofit's accomplishments are due in part to critical support from another Spelman sister, Karla Owens Davis, C'88, hired in 2019 as McKinney's second-in-command.

Davis' career includes 17 years at the U.S. EPA, serving as director of Memphis HOPE, being appointed by Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam as commissioner of the Tennessee Department of Labor and Workforce Development, and serving as a program officer at the Assisi Foundation. Ready for a new opportunity, Davis joined WCS as head of organizational operations.

Although their time at Spelman overlapped, the two had never met. When they finally crossed paths, there was an immediate meeting of the minds. Both saw intelligent, strong women honed by the Spelman legacy.

"I don't have to get to know you if I know you went to Spelman," McKinney commented.

Jamila Wright's Tea Shops Thrive With Support From Spelman Sisters

BY TARA WOODIN

Growing up in Atlanta, Jamila Wright, C'2010, never imagined herself becoming a business owner. An introduction to local Black entrepreneurs at Spelman College paved the road to negotiate her own path. Wright used the skills she learned at Spelman and the community created through her Spelman sisters to open her thriving tea franchise, Brooklyn Tea.

"My time at Spelman was this constant reimagining and understanding of what it meant to be a Black person and to be a Black woman in society," she said. "There was just so much access in a world that I hadn't quite been exposed to."

After graduating from Spelman, Wright spent seven years as an educator in the Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood in Brooklyn. She changed paths after dating her husband, Alfonso "Ali" Wright.

"When we met, we started dating around tea," she said. "He would make beautiful cups and pots of tea for me. It was just a beautiful way to commune, get to know each other and have something that grounded conversations that were healthy for us, too."

The couple became keenly aware of how eating and drinking different things affect the body. They wanted to use their knowledge to benefit the Black community. They thought about diabetes, high blood pressure and other things that can be remedied through diet, especially through beverages and reducing sugar intake. From there, Ali became a tea sommelier.

Like many successful businesses, Brooklyn Tea started as a small home operation. The couple bagged teas and cut labels in the living room of their Brooklyn apartment.

In December 2018, they opened their first storefront in Bedford-Stuyvesant in Brooklyn. Wright chose that neighborhood because it is where she first began teaching: she wanted to somehow connect her old world with her new one. Also, she said Bed-Stuy had a very dynamic way of sincerely uplifting Black owners.

Although she loved Brooklyn, Wright felt a calling back to Atlanta to be near her family. She franchised Brooklyn Tea and officially opened a second location in Castleberry Hill in February 2022 and opened a third location in Brooklyn in June. Wright said her time at Spelman and the relationships she made have been pivotal in every step of their success.

"I just started to round up Spelman sisters with different skill sets," she said. "One of the sisters became our trademark lawyer and worked with us on that two-year journey to get the Brooklyn Tea name established for us."

"Spelman sisters who were business owners and in corporate America gave us access to business advisers. Sisters who worked at Facebook gave us free ads. At the start of COVID, for two months Spelman sisters footed the bill with our company. There have been so many moments where we thought we didn't have enough and then we turned out to have more than we needed because of Spelman sisters. Just by their shared commitment to sisterhood, even beyond the gate, helped us to not only survive in a pandemic, but to really thrive," she said.

"Starting this business showed me the beast that Spelman really is. I can't quite put into words how intense the support is just to make sure we're OK, just on the foundation of us being Spelman sisters."

Danielle Deadwyler offers a mesmerizing performance as Mamie Till-Mobley in ‘Till’

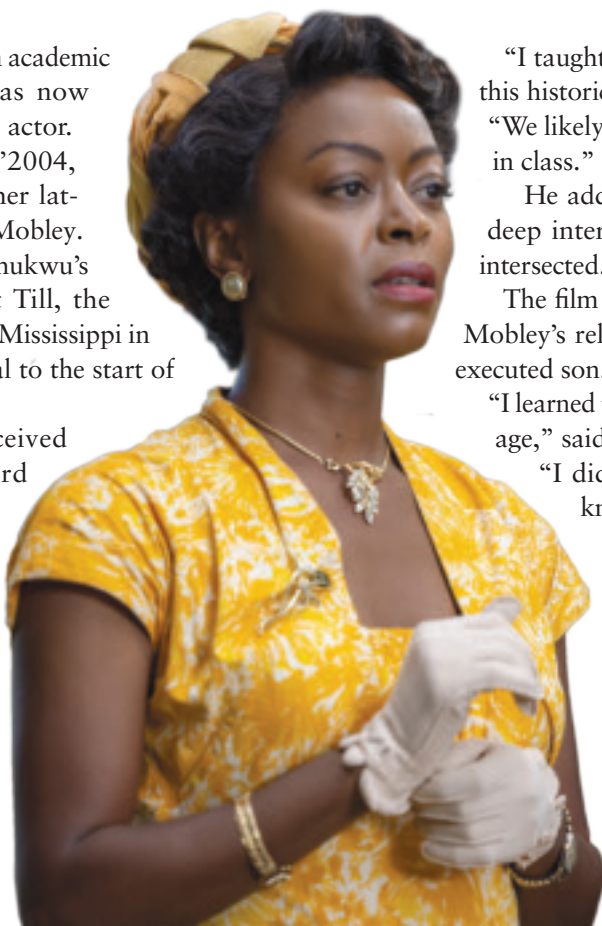

BY MAYNARD EATON

Converging a mother’s fight for justice and an alumna’s love for art and history in this civil rights drama

She is the quintessential Spelman academic and Atlanta activist who has now emerged as an accomplished actor. Meet Danielle Deadwyler, C’2004, who gives a riveting performance in her latest film as unsung heroine, Mamie Till-Mobley. Mamie is the heartbeat of Chinonye Chukwu’s “Till,” about the mother of Emmett Till, the 14-year-old whose gruesome murder in Mississippi in 1955 by White supremacists was pivotal to the start of the civil rights movement.

Deadwyler, who has already received a Gotham Independent Film Award for Outstanding Lead Performance, explained about accepting the role: “I got a personal history; I have a personal legacy with civil rights, and I have the naive gall to say yes.”

Jelani Cobb, the dean of Columbia University’s Graduate School of Journalism, taught Deadwyler African American studies at Spelman and marvels:

“I taught this student and now they’re in this historical cinematic piece,” he tweeted. “We likely covered the Emmett Till murder in class.”

He adds: “It’s amazing to see how her deep interest and her acting career have intersected.”

The film chronicles the true story of Till-Mobley’s relentless pursuit of justice for her executed son. It is a troubling portrayal.

“I learned to step into a certain kind of courage,” said Deadwyler during an interview.

“I didn’t want to do it because you know that it’s a painful thing. It’s going to do something to you. It truly hurts. It hurts emotionally, mentally, physically, spiritually, and yet you find different elements of who you are. [That’s] what Mamie found.”

rights movement at an early age. She worked with the SCLC Youth Development Program, volunteered with National SCLC, and attended Cascade United Methodist Church where the Rev. Dr. Joseph Lowery was pastor and president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"I'm deep in the game in Atlanta," she said. "I'm just deeply rooted in the city and every mirroring of me is Atlanta."

Former SCLC national board member and first national director for Youth and Students Affairs, Brenda Davenport, was Deadwyler's mentor.

"It is exciting to see her on the big screen and know something was said or presented to her while an SCLC youth that was embedded deep in her spirit. God blessed her with the role of Mother Mamie Till, a shero in our civil rights struggle for justice," said Davenport. "I am grateful to have known Mrs. Mamie Till, and I feel without a doubt she would be proud of our Danielle's performance. It does not yet appear all that is in store for such a beautiful, powerful and talented spirit."

Whoever she is and whatever she has become today is because of Spelman, Deadwyler opined. She was a history major who wanted to blend arts and education.

"I was an academic, so I was preparing myself to do that. But you know art had other plans," she laughed. "Spelman had art pulsating continuously amid me being hyper-educated in a richer, deeper sense of what it meant to be Black in America, and to be Black in the diaspora. My closest friends still to this day are my Spelman sisters."

That's why Deadwyler says her Spelman experience was a "deeply special" one, an uplifting and nurturing one.

"There was a tradition and an opportunity for experimentalism and uniqueness in that experience that you just can't get anywhere else," she explained. "I just knew I wanted to be with women who were like me and who were trying to figure it out through a similar experience as myself, so going to Spelman isn't going to a college or university, it's going family."

Deadwyler credits Spelman professors such as Drs. Marjorie Ganz, Beverly Guy Sheftall and Kathleen Phillips-Lewis for her success and for "sharpening my mind."

"She has been steadily reaching higher and higher heights, setting new goals for herself and surpassing each one of them," said Phillips-Lewis, Ph.D., division chair for the Humanities. "Whatever Danielle has tackled, she gives it 200-plus percent. Her work ethic is mind-boggling, and she strives for perfection, settling for no less than the best. Her work shows deep preparation, intense study and research. Danielle does not only portray the character, she becomes the character. This is only the beginning for her."

"Danielle was a wonderful young scholar activist whom I enjoyed having as a student," added Margery A. Ganz, Ph.D., professor emerita of history, "This role has enabled her to fuse her interests in American history and acting with spectacular results."

Beverly Guy-Sheftall is a Black feminist scholar, writer, editor and the Anna Julia Cooper Professor of Women's Studies and English at Spelman. She calls Deadwyler a true Spelman woman.

"Danielle has made a choice to change the world and to chart a pathway ahead for young Black women who have wrestled the rickety roads of life, have had few opportunities, or were urged to stay in their place. These women can now walk in her doorstep, and like Danielle, rise up and grab a firm hold on courage of their convictions [and] a dogged determination to succeed,” said Guy-Sheftall.

“I am always delighted when my former students embrace feminist values and carry with them the lessons of our women’s studies classes — that women’s lives matter even if they are forgotten or minimized throughout history,” she continued. “Danielle understood at a deep level that we should never forget the long legacy of resistance that Black women, in particular, have demonstrated, even in the most-challenging circumstances. Her brilliant portrayal of Emmett Till’s mother brings back precious memories of Danielle, and I look forward to her extraordinary film career in the coming decades.”

From Deadwyler’s degree in history from Spelman to her master’s from Columbia University; from local theater to one-woman shows; from playing Quita Maxwell, Quincy’s fierce, fearless and passionate sister in “The Haves and the Have Nots,” to her portrayal of tough-as-nails

Cuffee in “The Harder They Fall” — this lead role as Mamie Till in “Till” her former professors agree, brings together her love for history, storytelling and teaching.

Like Mamie Till-Mobley did as she stepped into the role as a courageous advocate for her son, Deadwyler is bravely entering a role that is putting her under a “scary” bright light.

“After tragedy struck, [Mamie] had to go through that [scary light] in order to become an extraordinary person. She realized, and, in her words: ‘She didn’t want to be a nobody anymore,’ and I think that is where I am. I think it’s a scary thing to step into the world in a big light like this. And I guess I’m not living in the dark anymore,” explained Deadwyler, who has 35 acting credits and three producer credits.

“I don’t get to quietly go into the night, right?” she continued. “Like there are some roles where you can take the role and just keep going about life. I don’t get to do that anymore because so many people know this, and so many people are going to be made aware and the possibilities are endless.

TACKLING THE DIVERSITY GAP IN COMPUTER & DATA SCIENCES

BY DONNA WILLIAMS LEWIS, C'79

Computer scientists continue to be in high demand, with the number of jobs in that field expected to grow much faster than the average for all occupations during this decade.

Jobs for computer and information research scientists are projected to grow by 21% from 2021 to 2031, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

However, Blacks remain highly underrepresented in the field, studies show. Zippia, a career and jobs website, put the number of Black computer scientists as low as 1% of all computer science professionals in 2019.

Spelman alumnae continue to take aim at that scenario by pumping more diversity into the field.

Among them, Talitha Washington is working to bring data science to all HBCUs through the new National Data Science Alliance. Pia Wilson-Body is delivering STEM education worldwide in her role as president of the Intel Foundation. Karina Liles, one of the original SpelBots, is still working with robots and teaching computing in the classroom and on the road.

Meanwhile, within Spelman's ever-evolving Computer and Information Sciences Department, one thing hasn't changed. Andrea Lawrence is in her 37th year of teaching students in what is currently one of the College's more popular majors. In fall 2021, Computer and Information Sciences ranked sixth among majors declared by first-time, first-year students. Here's a look at some of the alumnae working to change the face of the job world awaiting them.

TALITHA WASHINGTON

Talitha Washington, Ph.D., C'96, made headlines this year as the lead and principal investigator of the National Science Foundation's $10 million award to establish NDSA.

This alliance seeks to engage more than 1,000 HBCU faculty with industry representatives and other academic institutions to expand data science across all HBCUs.

NDSA's mission is to broaden participation and advance social justice in data science, says Washington, who is the director of the Atlanta University Center Data Science Initiative and a math professor at Clark Atlanta University.

Currently, Blacks account for just 3% of data and analytics professionals, according to a 2021 review of diversity within the industry by Harnham, a data and analytics recruitment firm. NDSA's goal is to increase the number of Blacks earning data science credentials to at least 20,000 by 2027.

Talitha Washington, C'96, is working to bring data science to all HBCUs through the new National Data Science Alliance.

"We need these diverse perspectives to ensure that racial biases don't enter into these data technologies and algorithms," Washington says, citing the use of data collection in everything from home loan risk to healthcare decisions, facial recognition software and predictive policing. "Having these diverse perspectives can actually make data technologies better for everyone."

Washington was teaching math at Howard University when some of her students approached her with a request that stands to change lives across the country.

"They were like, 'Dr. Washington, I need you to do some data science because I need to get a job. This is coming down, and you are all we've got, so let's do it,'" Washington recalls.

Supervising independent study led to Washington teaching data science classes and, ultimately, to her leading a data science program to improve undergraduate education at the National Science Foundation.

In August 2020, she was called back home to Atlanta as the inaugural director of the AUC Data Science Initiative, which prepares students to meet the growing demand for data scientists and data analytics experts.

“I ATTRIBUTE MUCH OF MY DRIVE TO MAKE POSITIVE CHANGE IN THE WORLD TO A QUOTE THAT RESONATES WITH ME, ‘TO WHOM MUCH IS GIVEN, MUCH IS REQUIRED.’” —PIA WILSON-BODY, C’87

In addition to becoming a math professor at CAU, she is also now on the affiliate faculty at Spelman and Morehouse colleges, and the Morehouse School of Medicine. In 2021, she became the first Black president of the Association for Women in Mathematics.

Washington credits Spelman with preparing her for the positions she has attained and the many hats she wears.

“That Spelman infusion of a ‘can-do’ attitude, to give back to the community, and the choice to change the world fuel my passion for bringing data science opportunities to the wider HBCU community,” she says. “I am fortunate to have that instilled in me at Spelman.”

PIA WILSON-BODY

As president of the Intel Foundation, Pia Wilson-Body, C’87, oversees an internationally active foundation focused on supporting philanthropic efforts, disaster relief and STEM education in underserved communities.

“When you look at the statistics and the reality about representation gaps, it can be overwhelming. And the reality is, change won’t happen overnight,” Wilson-Body says. “There are three key mindsets to how I approach developing a more diverse industry of technology innovators: persistence, preparation and possibility thinking.”

In 2022, the Intel Foundation partnered with other foundations and companies in a movement known as the Million Girls Moonshot. MGM has already reached 160,000 girls through high-quality STEM programs in its effort to inspire 1 million girls throughout the country to dream big and pursue engineering and computer careers.

“As I often say, a ZIP code doesn’t determine brilliance, but sometimes it determines access. Through programs like MGM and She Will Connect, the Intel Foundation is investing in long-term partnerships to excite, empower and engage middle-school girls in STEM learning,” Wilson-Body says.

Before joining the foundation in 2018, the 17-year Intel veteran held a variety of diversity positions within the multinational technology corporation. As part of Intel’s 2015 Diversity in Technology initiative, she developed an integrated public education, media and awareness strategy that led to several awards for Intel.

In 2014, Wilson-Body was named Working Mother magazine’s “Working Mother of the Year.” The Portland, Oregon, resident currently serves on numerous boards, including vice-chair of the YWCA USA Board of Directors.

She says she is especially proud of Intel’s partnership with the Reboot Representation Tech Coalition, in which Intel joined other organizations in making a gift to Spelman’s computer science challenge initiative to create a pre-freshman summer bridge program.

“I attribute much of my drive to make positive change in the world to a quote that resonates with me, ‘To whom much is given, much is required,’” Wilson-Body says. “This belief is one that I am grateful to have adopted during my time as a Spelman student.”

KARINA LILES

Karina Liles, Ph.D., C’2007, is one of six Spelman students who made history in 2005 as the first Black female competitive robotics team to compete in the International RoboCup championship in Osaka, Japan.

“We were the only undergraduate team, the only all-female team, the only Black team, and so on that international stage we looked like people who were watching us,” Liles says. “It was nice to know that other people could look inside and see what it was like for us ... to be able to compete at that level and also still be ourselves.”

Founded in 2004 by Andrew Williams, Ph.D., then an assistant professor in Spelman’s Computer and Information Sciences Department, Spelbots’ mission was to encourage students and young women of African descent to explore robotics and computer science. His book, Out of the Box: Building Robots, Transforming Lives (2009), traces his journey of overcoming life’s odds to lead a history-making robotics team of Spelman students to RoboCup. Since Spelman, Williams has continued to work in higher education, recently becoming dean of The Citadel School of Engineering in Charleston, South Carolina.

Pia Wilson-Body, C’87, is delivering STEM education worldwide in her role as president of the Intel Foundation.

Karina Liles, C'2007, is pictured with her STEM Truck, a traveling STEM-team classroom and resources to students and educators in rural areas.

Today, Liles is chair of Math and Computer Science and director of the Social Technologies and Robotics Lab at Claflin University in Orangeburg, South Carolina. She launched the Claflin SmartHOME, a living lab designed to combat health disparities in minority communities through technology.

In addition to her Claflin work, Liles owns a STEM Truck, a traveling STEM-team classroom and resources to students and educators in rural areas. She loves showing others how they can find happiness in computing, a field “which can be so intimidating,” Liles says. “For example, I enjoy hip-hop, so I programmed robots to dance to hip-hop songs.”

The SpelBots Robotics Team participated in competitions from 2005 to 2014.

Among the other five original SpelBots, Brandy Kinlaw, C'2005, is now a software development manager for Amazon Web Services. Kinlaw says she was deeply moved by the amount of support SpelBots received. “There were so many people who wanted us to win and were so proud of us. It was really touching and has inspired me throughout my personal life and my professional career,” she says.

Shinese Noble, C'2005, is founder of Simply Noble Designs, a brand and web design studio. She says being a SpelBot “was an experience that still is surreal to this day. ... It definitely showed me how small decisions can have a grand impact, and never doubt your abilities in anything.”

The other team members included Ebony O'Neal, C'2007, and team leader Aryen Moore-Alston, C'2005, who works in the food and beverage industry and was a 2014 competitor on the “Food Network Star” show. Former SpelBot Ebony Smith, C'2006, passed away in 2019.

ANDREA LAWRENCE

Andrea Lawrence, C'68, has seen a lot of change during her 37-year tenure in Spelman's Computer and Information Sciences Department.

“So, what we've really tried to do is focus on making students well-prepared and keeping things up to date,” says Lawrence, an associate professor who comes from four generations of Spelman women. Her mother worked in College administration for more than 20 years, and her three daughters, and one of her granddaughters are Spelman alumnae.

She said courses are being offered or developed in high-demand areas such as computer security, data science and artificial intelligence at Spelman.

“Basically, our mission is to produce strong computer science graduates. We try to do that by making sure our curriculum is strong but also by having contact with various people in industry and government who can help us and secure jobs for them as they graduate,” says Lawrence, the immediate-past president of ADMI, an organization that works to remedy educational issues in computer/information science and computer engineering confronting minority higher education institutions.

“Some go to graduate school, so they don't want a job, but I would say that no computer major who wants a job leaves Spelman without one.”

As she approaches four decades at Spelman, Lawrence has talked about retiring but cannot bring herself to leave just yet, saying, “I enjoy watching the girls blossom.”

JOYCE THORNTON'S JOURNEY TO CONSISTENT GIVING AND AN ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP

BY RENITA MATHIS

Before 1999, Joyce Thornton, C'70, gave to Spelman during reunion years that ended in zero and five – once every five years. It was what she thought was expected. However, an event to kickoff plans for Reunion 2000 changed her perspective on giving.

“It was a fundraising luncheon where [the late] Danny Flanigan spoke, and he told us what the No. 1 question potential donors asked him,” said Thornton, a retired educator who spent 30 years in Atlanta and DeKalb County public schools. “‘What is Spelman’s amount of alumnae participation?’ he asked. I thought that really made sense. How can we expect others to give if we don’t?”

Flanigan, a member of Spelman’s staff from 1970 to 2021, brought home the impact of consistent giving, no matter how small the amount.

“Donors want to know that you’re vested in yourself,” stressed Flanigan, who served as assistant to the business manager, then treasurer and vice president for the Division of Business and Financial Affairs, and ultimately executive vice president, treasurer, and chief investment officer.

Spelman’s alumnae giving hovered somewhere around 14% and needed to be improved. Moving forward, Thornton and several of her classmates, including Cheryl May-Holmes and Gloria Singleton Gaston, committed to annual gifts at the President’s Society level, where contributions range from $1,000 to $9,999.

Members of a competitive class, Thornton and her classmates are encouraged when they see each other’s names in the donor roll of the Spelman Messenger.

Joyce Thornton’s status on the donor roll began in a cooking class where she met a woman with whom she befriended.

“I’ve had classmates call and tell me, ‘I see your name under the President’s Society, and I think I can give at the President’s Society level,’” Thornton recalled.

In the most recent issue of the Messenger, Thornton no longer had the hashtag symbol by her name to indicate her President’s Society annual gift. A concerned classmate called to question her new giving trend.

The change in Thornton’s status on the donor roll began in a cooking class where she met a woman with whom she befriended.

“We became friendly, and I told her I graduated from Spelman College, a historically Black college,” she said of the exchange.

Shortly thereafter, police murdered George Floyd. Thornton received a call from the woman telling her that she and her husband wanted to donate to an HBCU. She remembered that Thornton attended Spelman.

“I didn’t know the amount of the couple’s donation, but I am forever grateful that Spelman benefited from the Trustee Leadership Circle level gift (contributions range $50,000 and up),” said an amazed and thankful Thornton.

Thornton is the first to attend college in her family. The donation in her name is an endowed scholarship.

The Joyce Eugenia Thornton, C’70, Endowed Scholarship is for first-generation college candidates who are full-time, undergraduate students pursuing a degree.

“I could not have imagined that my desire to learn healthier cooking methods, along with being friendly and kind, would have such a wonderful impact on my beloved Spelman,” said Thornton.

For more information on the Joyce Eugenia Thornton, C’70, Endowed Scholarship, contact Liane Sewell at lsewell@spelman.edu.

Donor Roll 2022

Fiscal Year 2022 (July 1, 2021, through June 30, 2022) was a remarkable fundraising year for Spelman College. More than $65 million was raised. We are deeply grateful for the steadfast support from each of our contributors, and several new leadership gifts and commitments of more than $49 million that were made. Your undaunted efforts ensure that Spelman continues to ascend. The tremendous success that Spelman has achieved is directly related to our strategic plan and your overwhelming support of the College's strategic priorities. These gifts are touching and changing the lives of our students as we execute our strategic goals of Delivering the Spelman Promise, Elevating the Spelman Difference, Enhancing Operational Excellence, and Promoting Academic Innovation. Delivering the Spelman Promise – to ensure that Spelman students who enter our gates have the opportunity to graduate and succeed beyond the Spelman gate — is our No. 1 objective. These four objectives continue to work hand in hand to uphold Spelman College's standard of excellence. Please join us in thanking the FY 2022 Leadership Donors.

FUNDING THE FUTURE

Phase 2 of Alumnae-Fueled 25@25 Technology Initiative Helps Spelman Lead the Race in Technology, Alumnae Giving

BY VICKIE G. HAMPTON

Perhaps nothing ensures that an institution keeps up with the leaps and bounds in education than an investment in technology. The success of Phase 1 of the 25@25 Technology Initiative — launched in 2018 by two alumnae, current Spelman Board of Trustees member, Gena Hudgins Ashe, C'83, and former Spelman Board of Trustees member, Celeste Watkins-Hayes, C'96, to raise funds for Spelman's technology infrastructure — has made the alumnae-led campaign a standard bearer for technology-based alumni fundraising for other institutions.

The overall goal of the initiative is to raise $2 million. In Phase 1, $1.35 million was raised by 54 participants, most of whom donated $25,000. Phase 2 is on track to raise the remaining $650,000 by Dec. 31, 2022. Ten women have stepped up — several for the second time — to give an additional $25,000 or $50,000 to meet the goal.

"In Phase 1, we focused on getting donors to contribute $25,000. In Phase 2, we chose to focus on encouraging donors to contribute at the $50,000 level, with some donors contributing as much as $75,000 over the course of the campaign through participation in both phases. And the response has been incredible," said Ashe.

"We have a very targeted approach to fundraising for this initiative. Through our, mine and Celeste's, personal networks, and those of 25@25 donors, we identify individuals we believe would be interested in giving at this level and for this cause, and we proactively reach out to them to solicit their support," she continued.

In Phase 1, the co-founders invited members of their network to participate. In Phase 2, they are encouraging 25@25 members to also invite alumnae from their networks to increase the number of participants, who will then help the initiative reach the $2 million goal.

According to Watkins-Hayes, the 25@25 donors want to make an indelible imprint.

"We viewed the technological backbone of the College as an important but often overlooked place to put philanthropic

The 25@25 Technology Initiative has become a critical new channel of support for the college's technology ambitions. As technology increasingly plays a key role in modernizing the learning experience, this alumnae-led initiative is helping to ensure that everything from speedy connectivity to classrooms equipped for hybrid learning to the ability to collaborate across the campus, the AUCC and the globe are possible.

Following is a list of enhancements and upgrades:

Cybersecurity, the College's top technology priority

The 25@25 fund supports a major cybersecurity partnership with a leading global cybersecurity firm that provides Endpoint Detection and Response (EDR) capability and is essential to keeping our network and the resources attached to it safe from unauthorized access. Funds also were used to engage a cybersecurity advisory service that continually assesses the college's technology infrastructure and provides detailed information regarding vulnerabilities or potential vulnerabilities that need to be addressed.

Canvas, a learning management system, implemented in Spring 2022

Canvas is an industry-leading platform that offers powerful teaching capabilities with an easy-to-use and intuitive interface. This is also the first semester Canvas is being used to support our residential undergraduate students.

New cross-registration automation expected to go live in January 2023

Students from Spelman, Morehouse College and Clark Atlanta University will be able to register for classes at sister institutions using the common Banner interface they use to register for classes on their home campus. For the first time, class rosters and reports regarding cross-registered students will be available to faculty and administrators at each institution.

Atlanta University Center Consortium fiber ring has targeted completion date in 2023

The fiber ring (funded by an NSF grant) will connect current AUCC members (Spelman, Morehouse College, Clark Atlanta University, Morehouse School of Medicine, and the Atlanta University Center Robert W. Woodruff Library) and Tuskegee University, as well as AUCC with several research networks throughout the country and around the world. The College also is planning to implement the EduRoam service that will allow Spelman users to access networks at other member campuses using their Spelman user ID and password.

dollars,” she said. “But when the pandemic hit, it really drove home its importance as the school had to pivot to remote instruction and work.”

The 25@25 Technology Initiative made it possible for the College to respond to the challenges of teaching during a pandemic with its funding of Hyflex classrooms.

“This new technology platform gives professors the flexibility to teach classes in person or with students in remote locations, or both groups simultaneously,” said Ashe. “And in the wake of the pandemic, it is more critical than ever to our successful student outcomes that we have the technological infrastructure and capability to connect with and teach them wherever they may be.”

The second imprint is on alumnae-driven fundraising itself, where alumnae approach and encourage other alumnae to provide major gifts to the College.

“The spiel is pretty straight forward: We are part of a unique circle of Spelmanites. We are raising funds to support Spelman’s technology and innovation objectives to help ensure that our students and faculty remain competitive with other top-tier higher ed institutions,” said Ashe.

Beyond the impact these significant gifts are having now and will have well into the future, the initiative is leaving another distinguishing mark: a strengthened bond of sisterhood among the donors.

“The bonds that have formed between the amazing alumnae who make up the 25@25 circle have been the bonus of the effort,” said Ashe.

Watkins-Hayes concurred: “A key part of the donor experience for the 25@25 network is the community of other 25@25 donors,” she said. “So, we have brought the group together in person or virtually to receive updates about the College, hear about the latest developments in the technology infrastructure, and fellowship with each other.”

“In this era of long lead times and price volatility, the 25@25 fund has provided IT with a tool to help mitigate risks and remain on track as we modernize the technology landscape at the College,” said John B. Wilson, vice president for Technology Services and CIO for the College.

One urgent need the initiative helped the College quickly respond to was a surge of post-COVID demands.

“Students and faculty have heightened expectations regarding their ability to connect to the internet and have a world-class experience,” he said. “When students returned to campus [after COVID restrictions were lifted], they had increased demand and expectations regarding bandwidth and connectivity. They wanted the unlimited bandwidth, ease of connectivity, and reliability they had become accustomed to on their home networks.”

Expecting this trend of high expectations to continue, the College has developed a three-leg connectivity strategy: the first of which was replacing in-ground fiber, while the second leg involves connecting all AUCC members via a fiber ring, a high-speed, high-bandwidth, secure research network (see Tech Advances sidebar).

The third leg is to develop a 5G (or complementary technology) strategy that will allow students to remain connected as they traverse the AUCC.

To ensure that Spelman keeps up with the rapid pace of technology, Wilson said the College must remain forward-facing and nimble.

The strength and capability of the college’s campus network will not only be important in its ability to attract and retain students and faculty, but also in attracting grant funding.

“In about 18 months, Spelman’s infrastructure will advance significantly, and we will be well-positioned to support advanced instructional and research initiatives going forward,” he said.

Hyflex classrooms are 50% complete

Hyflex classrooms give the professor the flexibility to teach classes in person, or with students in remote locations, or both groups simultaneously. These classrooms have several monitors strategically placed so instructors can interact with their notes, course content and students. They also are equipped with a central room computer and teleconference capabilities to support applications like Zoom, Teams and other teleconferencing platforms.

The campus fiber upgrade completed in Summer of 2020

This project was funded by the College.

‘RESPECTABLE’: EXAMINING MOREHOUSE’S IDEAL OF THE BLACK MAN

BY ALEX DAHNE

How does it feel to be groomed as the solution to a national Black male problem?

This is the guiding paradox of Respectable: Politics and Paradox in Making the Morehouse Man (Aug. 2, 2022; UC Press), which provides an in-depth examination of graduates of Morehouse College, the nation’s only historically Black college for men.

Author Saida Grundy, C’2004, a former Miss Morehouse, writes from a unique insider perspective, crafting an incisive feminist and sociological account informed by her personal insights and scholarly expertise. A feminist sociologist of race and an assistant professor of sociology, African American studies, and women’s and gender studies at Boston University, Grundy received her bachelor’s in sociology from Spelman and her doctorate in sociology and women’s studies from the University of Michigan and often contributes to The Atlantic.

In Respectable, Grundy holds that, while Black male collegians are often culturally fetishized for “beating the odds,” the image of Black male success that Morehouse promotes and celebrates is belied by many of the realities that challenge the students on its campus.

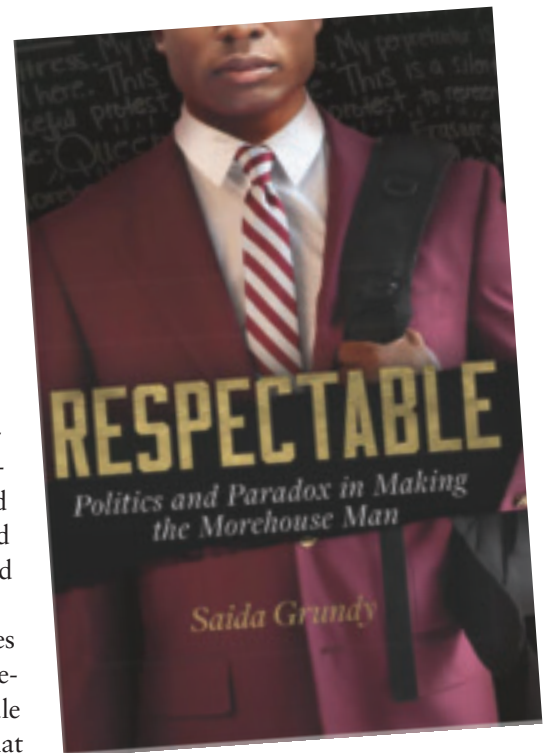

Grundy gathered the experiences of former students and others connected to Morehouse to illustrate the narrow, conservative vision of masculinity molded at a competitive Black institution. The men interviewed unveil a culture that forges confining ideas of respectable Black manhood within a context of relentless peer competition and sexual violence, measured against unattainable archetypes of idealized racial leadership.

Grundy underlines the high costs of making these men: the experiences of low-income students who navigate class issues at Morehouse; the widespread homophobia laced throughout the college’s notions of Black male respectability; and the crushingly conformist expectations of a college that sees itself as making “good” Black men.

As Morehouse’s problems continue to pour out into national news feeds, this book contextualizes these issues — not as a defect of Black masculinity, but as a critique of what happens when an institution services an imagination of what Black men should be, at the expense of more fully understanding the many ways these young people see themselves.

Many believe the path of upward mobility for successful Black Americans is paved by education, neighborhood resources or employment, but rarely is it seen through the lens of African Americans viewing gender as a vehicle for class and status.

“Respectable is an indispensable addition to the canon of work on Black masculinity. Incisive, provocative and deeply researched, this study will reframe the parameters of the discussion,” said William Jelani Cobb, author of The Substance of Hope: Barack Obama and the Paradox of Progress.

ALEX DAHNE is publicity director for University of California Press.

Barbara A. Walker, C'93, has recently published Perspectives, the first collection from her “Through Her Eyes” series. The series is a collection of short stories inspired by various women of the Bible where Walker weaves compelling fictional versions of their lives that explore their complexity as vibrant, ambitious, intelligent, determined and sexual beings.

In Perspectives, which was self-published in April 2022 and is sold on Amazon and Barnes and Nobles’ online store, Walker features fictional stories set during the dawn of Judaism and Islam as told through the eyes of three women who were close to Abraham, considered the father of three of the world’s most prominent religions: Judaism, Islam and Christianity.

Sarah, Abraham’s first wife, tells a desperate, yet romantic love story about a marriage mired with trials.

Hagar, his much younger second wife, tells a story of her own ambitions and turns a different lens on all that transpired as a more mature Abraham struggled to become a father.

Finally, Ado, who married Abraham’s nephew, Lot, adds yet another layer to the character of Abraham as she tells her own adventure-filled life story.

The three women were much like women of today: complex and dichotomous by nature. In teachings, a negative cast is often painted over their lives, especially Hagar and Ado. But, according to Walker, a selective account should not be used to condemn or elevate people.

Walker uses Perspectives to magnify the importance of considering perspective when reading a narrative, including the writer’s perspective.

“The teller of the story dictates the tone and the content. The writer’s words reflect their truth, but it may or may not be the truth,” she explains.

“While these stories are informed by the actual events described in the Old Testament, they are not intended to be a replacement or supplement to the Word as it is written,” says Walker. “It is a fictional account for entertainment purposes only. I encourage you to read their stories in the Bible, Genesis 11-25. It is the original perspective from which my stories spring.”

My next book in the series is called Stone Catcher, and it features stories about Delilah, Jezebel and Tamar (fictionalized name of Lot’s oldest-surviving daughter after Sodom was destroyed.) It will also have a bonus chapter that continues Hagar’s story and delves into her life after the death of Sarah a bit more. It should be released early next year.

Black Americans are disproportionately impacted by the effects of climate change. They make up 13% of the U.S. population but breathe 40% dirtier air. They also are twice as likely to be hospitalized or die from climate-related health problems (such as worsening of chronic diseases due to air pollution and hotter temperatures; and an increase in allergies, due to mold and other exposures) than their White counterparts.

In her book, Before the Streetlights Come On, climate activist Heather McTeer Toney, C'98, insists that those most affected by climate change are best suited to lead the movement for climate justice.

McTeer Toney brings her background in politics, community advocacy, and leadership in environmental justice. She currently serves as the vice president for Community Engagement for the Environmental Defense Fund, an organization that represent more than 3 million climate and environment allies committed to fighting climate change and helping shape the world’s biggest solutions to the climate crisis.

Before the Streetlights Come On is a revolutionary exploration of why and how Black Americans are uniquely qualified to lead national and global conversations around systems of racial disparity and solutions to the climate crisis. As the country delves deeper into solutions for systemic racism and past injustices, she argues, the environmental movement must shift direction and leadership toward those most affected and most affecting change: Black communities.

Yet, in Black communities, climate change is seen as less urgent when compared to other pressing issues — including police brutality, gun violence, job security, food insecurity, and the blatant racism faced daily around the country.

The book’s title is an urgent call to action taken from her childhood days.

“Like a lot of Black children, regardless of generation, I had to be in the house before the streetlights came on. When those lights turned on, ‘Hurry up, we ain’t got all day!’ was the call to action,” said Toney. “Right now, that same call to action is carried in the waves of massive hurricanes, on the winds of devastating firestorms, and in the uncharacteristic heat of winter. Climate conditions have escalated past the point of danger. We need the world, including the Black community, to respond accordingly.”

Making it Happen: How to Turn Setbacks into Comebacks for Generational Success by Leah Howard, Ph.D., C’2014, and her mother, Pat Howard, Ph.D. The book follows their journey as students of life and academia. The authors share their experiences of pursuing higher education in order to help others navigate their own paths to success.

As Leah’s first mentor in life, Pat was determined to provide insight for her daughter by sharing her experiences of college, professional school and life beyond. Leah’s inherited blueprint did not exclude her from experiencing and overcoming her own unique challenges. The perseverance of both mother and daughter led to the pursuit of what many consider the pinnacle of academic excellence: earning the title of “Dr.” Making it Happen serves as a passing-of-the-torch, mentorship model for people desiring to learn strategies necessary for cultivating their own saga of success.

Jasmine Roshon Humphrey Owens, C’2009, has written her first book, Girls Can Dream, out of her passion to educate and expose children to the many career choices the world has to offer. The book was published in March 2021 by Roshon Press.

The children’s book takes readers through the alphabet to introduce them to 26 careers that they can aspire to be. It is a celebration of African American girls — their diversity, excellence and limitless potential.

Lisa-Marie Pierre, C’2007, was inspired to write Intellectual Will: A Guided Journal for Self-Discovery in Uncertain Places when a friend asked her, “How do you get organized?” That question led her down a rabbit hole of exploring organization from a making order and a coordination perspective. Intellectual Will is a roadmap for what she calls “idea explorers”—those who are walking an unknown path and need to align their intention with their direction.

“The world needs to experience your dreams. Get organized, make a plan and get focused, so you can take action. It’s time you unleashed your dreams and create your path,” she states.

Eight percent of the journal’s profits are donated to Grown in Haiti, a Haiti-based organization that promotes reforestation and community development. Pierre says she donates to Haiti because she believes in “giving back to pioneers of liberation; those who believed in people over profit.”

Brianna Peppins, C’2017, writes a novel about the experiences of 14-year-old Avielle LeBeau as she starts her freshman year at Briarcliff Preparatory School for Girls, one of the few remaining historically Black boarding schools.

She has dreams of fitting in with kids who look like her, continuing her family legacy and joining the school newspaper — and she desperately wants to catch the eye of a certain sophomore math whiz who attends Preston Academy across the street. But all of these wants become obsolete when Avi discovers a devastating secret about her big sister’s boyfriend.

Avi has two choices: she can keep this secret and pray it doesn’t blow up in their faces, or she can tell the truth, risking her sister’s reputation and possibly destroying the foundation of their relationship.
