For more than 140 years, Spelman College has been an incubator for Black women’s education and excellence. We are global leaders in educating women of African descent, and home to more than 2,000 students from around the U.S. and the world.

As the #1 HBCU in the country, Spelman is here to support you with cutting-edge technology, innovation, and teaching.

Spelman women are trailblazers. We are dedicated to your intellectual, creative, ethical, and leadership development, and it shows in everything from our vibrant campus life to our incredible commencement speakers to our Gates Millennium Scholars, Fulbright Fellowship winners, Truman Scholars, and Marshall Scholars.

At Spelman, you don’t just get an education. You find sisterhood that will last a lifetime and experience an education that will help you build the confidence and skills you’ll need to change the world.

Spelman was built for young Black women like you—that’s the Spelman difference.
WHAT ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE LOOKS LIKE
Any school can brag about its small class sizes. At Spelman, academic excellence means so much more than that.

Sure, our class sizes are small—with an average faculty ratio of 11:1, you and your professors will know each other’s names in no time—but the true excellence comes from our dedication to providing education centered on Black women.

Spelman is ranked #7 for innovation and is a top 25 school in the country for teaching, and it’s easy to see why.

From our custom textbooks and flipped classrooms to courses where you’ll be challenged at every turn, Spelman is at the leading edge of teaching excellence.

You’ll learn to bring a multidisciplinary approach to every class while benefiting from the traditions that have consistently made Spelman the #1 HBCU in the country.

Our mission is to surround you with other smart, driven women and to give you the support you need while you hone your intellectual and critical thinking skills.

Our wide range of majors and minors in both humanities and STEM means you can pursue your interests on campus, through study abroad programs, and in internships.

Interested in a class we don’t offer? We’ve got you covered with academic partnerships with the Morehouse School of Medicine, Georgia Institute of Technology, Emory University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and more.

Curious about conducting academic research? During our annual Research Day, more than 200 students share their original research findings, and Spelmanites frequently publish and present alongside faculty.

As the #1 producer of Black women with Ph.D.s in STEM, Spelman takes academic achievement seriously, and we provide the intellectual, emotional, and social support you need to succeed.

Spelman’s 76% graduation rate far outpaces the national average. More than 30% of Spelman’s graduating students report acceptance to graduate or professional school, and 28% report accepting an offer of full-time employment.

“The work is hard — but the learning is easy.”

— KENYA, CLASS OF 2025, MIAMI, FL
At Spelman, you’ll become fully yourself. Some of that development happens in the classroom as you sharpen your intellect and prepare for your career.

Other aspects of your development happen through involvement on (and off) campus. Here at Spelman, you get to figure out how to be authentically you.

“It’s hard to be down going through your day. The campus is beautiful, green and life-giving. And we see Black women being free, just being.”
— Summer, Class of 2024, New Orleans, LA
Among Spelmanites, being sisterly is a verb, and it’s a commitment that our students take seriously.

Sisterhood is built into Spelman’s DNA.

There’s a reason so many of our alumnae return to campus regularly, become pen pals with current students, and help locate internship and employment opportunities.

Sisterhood means being seen and heard.
Sisterhood means...
- Those around you want to see you succeed and flourish
- You’ll always have support, community, and love
- No matter what, no matter where your path in life takes you, you’ll never be alone
- Your Spelman sisters will push you to do, and be, your best

Sisterhood means having each other’s backs through thick and thin.

Spelman students and professors create new models for leadership, experience, and impact so that you will graduate with the confidence to forge your own path.

Spelman sisters also understand—and reflect the true diversity of Black women’s identities and experiences.

You’ll meet Spelmanites from around the country and across the globe.

Spelmanites are introverts, extroverts, and everything in between. Your sisters come from all backgrounds, faiths, and interests.

Sisterhood is built into Spelman’s DNA, and celebrating our diversity is at the heart of everything we do.

“At Spelman, you’ll feel loved in a way you never have before.”

— BLAYRE, CLASS OF 2024, DALLAS, TX
The four years you spend at Spelman are unique, and they form the foundation for everything that comes later.

Whether you want to go to graduate school, land a full-time job, or launch a business, you’ll have the professional and academic skills you need.

“There’s a strong emphasis to leave the gates and be in the world... I can’t think of a semester when I wasn’t doing something interesting off campus.”

— KALESE, CLASS OF 2022, NASHVILLE, TN

The education you get on campus at Spelman is second to none, and you’ll get true mentorship from your faculty—not just academic advising.

Our partnerships with other leading institutions also allow you to customize your educational journey.

Take your education around the world: Our students study abroad in 40+ countries.

Spelmanites graduate with all the information they need about career preparation and life after graduation. Many places tout such success, but at Spelman, it’s a reality.

Our students begin exploring and preparing in their first year. You’ll pursue fellowships and internships that provide you with invaluable experiences, along with building powerful networks of people who’ve seen what you can do.

And that’s not all: 600+ companies and graduate programs visit Spelman each year searching for the best of the best—and finding them.

Don’t miss out on Spelpreneur, either. Our co-curricular entrepreneurship program teaches the fundamentals of entrepreneurship. Compete for funding to make your business idea a reality!

Our strong global alumnae network can provide the leverage you need. Whether job searching, moving to a new area, or looking for exceptional volunteer opportunities, the network won’t fail to produce.

In addition, our Sister 2 Sister Professional Mentoring program pairs alumnae and students in formal mentoring relationships, and over 100 alumnae working in diverse industries participate every year.
"Spelman is a space made for Black women to excel so we can make change in the world."

Spelman was listed among College Magazine’s Top 10 HBCUs Changing the World in 2020.

Students and on-campus organizations like The Feminist Majority Leadership Foundation and Afreke, which focuses on building spaces of safety and belonging for the LGBTQ+ community, are hard at work making change.

Our alumnae—your future sisters—are activists, artists, entrepreneurs and innovators, executives, lawyers, scientists, teachers, and so much more.

On campus and off, Spelmanites are devoted to changing the world for the better.

How will YOU excel? What change will you make? We’d love to help you find out.
